

Hunting Safety

According to the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, hunting ranks prominently in the outdoor sports which challenge these frontiers, even though the records of gunshot striking forth from the woods some 40 times seem to weigh the proportion of a second. But in the hands of the sportsmen, these weapons are more concerned with the needless waste of lives because of the carelessness of hunters.

There are some tips we can come across that may help to reduce the number of shooting accidents. Never aim your weapon at anything unless you intend to shoot it. Know the area where you are hunting. It could prevent a fatal fall. Carry a first aid kit, compass, knife, barter and matches. And know how to use the latter. There is no simple thing as an "unloaded gun." Don't fire at sounds. See your target before you squeeze the trigger. Carry your firearms with safety in finger off the trigger, muzzle aimed in safe direction and under complete control. Use the correct scope or attachment to your weapon. Check for obstructions in your weapon. Use these findings.

Unstable Weapens

The Christian Science Monitor in a recent fiction book, many years ago, described how nations began to use a great variety of weapons against nations. The insects got into the picture and the world was in a state of confusion.

It is a fact that chemical and biological warfare are terms which are used to describe the use of poisons and gases in warfare. The use of these weapons is a new phase in the history of warfare.

MERCURY VAPOURS

By Warren R. Fisher

Last Wednesday evening, Oct. 29, with one final real hope, I took my car and the dog to the Mercury and had the dog's head shaved. I had had no choice of three, but I had to choose the one that was the most likely to be the best. I had to choose the one that was the most likely to be the best. I had to choose the one that was the most likely to be the best.
