Bow And Arrow Season For Whitetail, Fallow And European Deer Now Open

The bow and arrow season for whitetail, fallow and European red deer, opened Oct. 1 and continues through Oct. 31; reopens Dec. 1 and extends through Dec. 31 and every county in the Commonwealth will be open to hunting, according to the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Frankfort.

The limit is one deer per season, per hunter, except on the Ft. Campbell area in Christian and Trigg counties where a special two-deer concession has been arranged. Deer of either sex may be taken by bow-hunters during daylight hours only.

Each year more archery hunters take advantage of Kentucky's long season--62 days of hunting. Last year, for instance, more than 6,000 participated in the statewide hunt and many were successful in their quest for a deer. This year an even greater number is expected in the fields and woods and indications are that they will find a greater herd than ever before, According to the Department biologists, the population is steadily increasing, offering more targets over a wider area than ever before.

All deer hunters must have in possession a valid Kentucky hunting license and deer permit. Permits are available for residents and non-residents at all county clerk's offices and from many sporting goods dealers, Cost of the permit is $10.50.

A resident owner of farmlands, his wife or dependent children or tenants and their dependent children living on the farmland are not required to possess a hunting license or permit. However, such persons may not remove deer from their land unless they have obtained written permission from a conservation officer or deer check station.

Residents 65 years of age or older are exempted from license requirements provided they carry on their person an affidavit stating the year of birth and place of residence. Resident servicemen on furlough of more than three days may hunt in the county of legal residence at the time of entrance into the service but must carry proper identification and papers showing furlough status.

Deer may be taken with longbow, with hardhead arrows with broadhead points at least 7/8 inch wide. Crossbows, not not less than 10 pounds pull, with hardhead arrows with broadhead points at least 7/8 inch wide, may be used in Pioneer Weapons Area only.

Archery deer hunters may not carry firearms of any kind during the archery season. Deer may not be taken with boats, or any type of vehicles, or any domestic animals, including dogs.

Each hunter who kills a deer must immediately attach to the deer the locking tag provided with the deer permit. The tag must be attached by piercing the skin and membrane between the bones of the hind leg just above the hocks and locking the metal tag around one so that it cannot be removed without destroying the tag. The tag must remain attached to the deer until the carcass is processed and packaged by locker plant, butcher or hunter. The postal card must be separated from the metal tag when tagging the deer and retained as proof of ownership should the tag be lost.

After taking a deer, bow and arrow hunters must leave the hunting area. They cannot assist others in taking deer.

The two-deer limit applies only to the Fort Campbell Wildlife Management Area. If a deer is taken with a state-wide permit on the area, the permit card will be stamped and dated by authorities there and the tag secured before the deer is removed from the post. A permit card so stamped and dated shall be valid evidence that the bearer is eligible to receive a free Fort Campbell tag.

Persons having taken one deer at Fort Campbell are not eligible to hunt deer anywhere else in the state during the season. Any person having taken a deer elsewhere in Kentucky may legally obtain a second deer tag free at Fort Campbell on the presentation of the permit card, for stamping and dating. Permission must be obtained for each hunt on the Fort Campbell area and hunters must stay within assigned hunting areas. No hunting is allowed on Mondays or Tuesdays. The deer season on the area will be closed when and if 4,500 deer are taken.

Farmers Reminded Not To Hire Children During School Hours

With the start of the school year, farmers were reminded to hire youngsters under 16 only outside school hours by Pat Mehlan, Regional Director of the U. S. Department of Labor's Wage Hour Division.

Even the 14 and 15 year olds who have successfully completed the special 4-H courses in tractor and other equipment operation and on animal agriculture students may not work during school hours under the child labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act, Mehlan said.

The Division is presently instituting a full back to school campaign to be explained and its responsible for enforcing the child labor standards, the FLSA.

"This law applies to migrants as well as local children, so both may get the education needed in today's economy," Mehlan stated. "On a typical day, migrant children should be in school, not in the fields," he emphasized.

That young farmers in general aren't getting as much help as their older neighbors is one of the Wage Hour Division's findings in surveys taken in Kentucky and other states. Only about one-half of the minors hired as hands on farms during school hours are under grades 8 and 9, the normal entry ages, and at specific allowable work, as permitted by law, Mehlan said.

Mr. Mehlan pointed out that in many cases the children hired are from the home farm and their parents are gainfully employed.

He reminded farmers that in states where the child labor laws differed from the federal standards, the higher ones apply.

Mehlan, a resident of Louisville, is the Area Director of the Wage Hour Division, Federal Building, 120 West Vine Street, Lexington, Kentucky. His telephone is 252-2312), will be happy to answer any questions about the law.
