

Lieutenant Governor Wendell H. Ford Addresses Farm-City Week Group

The following is an address by Lieutenant Governor Wendell H. Ford at a Farm-City Week Kickoff Luncheon in Carlisle.

I am happy to participate in this Kickoff Luncheon for Kentucky's 15th Annual Farm-City Week dedication. The objective of Farm-City Week is to promote understanding between farm and city people and to develop a united approach toward the problems and opportunities of both farm and city life.

This is a worthy objective. Each hand washes the other. Every Kentuckian is a consumer. Even if you live in the tallest apartment building in the largest city, you are a consumer, and it is to your interest to help the farmer stay in business as he can produce the food and fiber you must have for a good life.

While every farmer is a consumer of the products his neighbors and even his own family consume, the farmer is also the producer of the products that give life to our state.

As our state's main source of food and fiber, the farmer is the backbone of our economy. It is the responsibility of all of us to help the farmer stay in business as he can produce the food and fiber you must have for a good life.

The federal administration has not announced its farm program recommendations, but the Agriculture Department's recent report on the farm program indicates that the program will be continued in its present form.

What, cotton, and feed grains are the most important commodities of Kentucky. The cotton and feed grain are the most important commodities of Kentucky.

The total increase in farm cash receipts in Kentucky in 1968 was less than one-half of one per cent. Farm cash receipts were $2,400 million in 1967 and $2,418,100 in 1968.

Specifically, Kentucky needs thorough research, new marketing systems, new distribution methods, and improved communication to get the information from University and other sources to the farmer's hand.

For example, when cities fail to handle the problems of air pollution, sewerage, municipal wastes, industries, and marketing systems, and other control and other negative aspects of the city problem, they are not helping the farmer.

ally so." Willnesses to cooperate has been in recent years with improved communications, better highways and more turning back roads, but thousands of farm and city people in Kentucky are still ignorant of each other's needs and attitudes regarding farm and city life.

As city dwellers and as rural dwellers, we are both of the same species. We are both human beings with the same needs and desires. We are both producers and consumers of the same products.

For example, city residents usually think of farm income as a problem that is not their problem, but they are not. They are not the farmer, but they are the consumer of the farmer's products.

LOOKING AT THE INSIDE. EXPLORE UNLAWFUL STRUCTURES. According to a study made by the city of Louisville in 1968, there are 10,000 illegal structures in the city.

On the earlier date the SDS plans to avoid Chicago, and although they cannot hope for the degree of success they experienced during the Democratic Convention, they are confident that they will be able to conduct a successful campaign in their own city.

It is in the interest of every Kentuckian for the College of Agriculture, the State Department of Agriculture, and the Agricultural Extension Service to work together to help the farmer.

As a result of the study, the city of Louisville has decided to take action to eliminate these structures. The city will be taking action to eliminate these structures.

Don't encourage accidents to happen. A play on the 64-letter word "DRAFT" will appear on bumper stickers being placed on state-owned cars throughout Kentucky.
