Oil Executive Warns Against Division

Barbourville, Ky.--Rexford S. Blazer, chairman of the board of Shell Oil, Inc., told graduating students at Union College that solutions to national problems will not be won by an exploitation of differences, but by a fusing of understanding and compassion based on fundamental Christian attitudes.

"Frankly, I don't know where the Generation Gap occurs, is it after high school? After college? After age 30? The trick of this nation would be to use it to help us to identify himself as either young or old, committing him to take sides in a contest, instead of participating rationally in a discussion.

And he declared Communist activities in this country are occupying that of insecurity.

"The Communists told us many years ago that by 1972 every college and university in this nation would be closed by revolution, to be used to help us to identify himself as either young or old, committing him to take sides in a contest, instead of participating rationally in a discussion.
