Governor Nunn Proclaims July 19-25 Farm Safety Week in Ky.

Three Day Seminar at Lexington

A three-day seminar dealing with physical, academic and behavioral problems of children will be held in Lexington July 28-30 by the Multidisciplinary Institute. All sessions will be at Spindletop Research, Iron Works Road.

Lectures will be conducted by Dr. James R. Watkins, Institute director, and six other members of the Institute staff. Dr. Watkins said the first-day sessions will cover theory, the second day evaluation and the third rehabilitation. Discussions will encompass the fields of psychology, sociology, functional vision, speech and hearing, education, physical fitness and podiatry. The Multidisciplinary Institute was organized in 1959 by two remedial reading teachers, a child psychologist and an optometrist. Designed to encompass the total spectrum of child development, the Institute is now undertaking research in speech pathology, child psychology, pediatric optometry, socio-economics, special education.

The week of July 19 has been proclaimed as "Farm Safety Week" in Kentucky by Governor Louie B. Nunn.

Governor Nunn, in his proclamation, urged "all Kentuckians who live on farms and those persons and groups serving or allied with agriculture to intensify their individual efforts to curtail and halt accidents where and when possible."

The Kentucky Farm Safety Council, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Jesse Shipp, Glendale, has asked local officials and groups to help in the promotion of this important event. County judges throughout the Commonwealth have been urged to issue a proclamation at the local level, calling attention to the need for greater safety on the farm.

State Agriculture Commissioner J. Robert Miller, said, "The personal tragedy and human suffering that comes with an accident makes our efforts toward greater farm safety worthy objectives."

Professional and lay persons interested in further information on the seminar may contact Mrs. Judy Edicourt, Assistant Coordinator, 2459 Nicholasville Road, Lexington, phone 606-277-0631.

The US 68 grade drain and surfacing project is scheduled to be completed in the fall of 1971.
