COUNTY EXTENSION AGENTS

Mrs. Margie Wilson

Most County Farmers got their cucumbers planted in good time. They are now coming up and are receiving the first dusting. Bobby Sexton irrigated his field immediately after planting and he has an excellent stand. This project is being watched closely by many in the county as a possible source of new income.

Alfalfa weevil is showing up later than normal. Most growers are cutting for hay and did not have to spray. They need to watch for possible damage on the new crop. Weevil normally leave the field about this time of year but occasionally they remain to eat on the new growth and can do considerable damage at this stage. Several chemicals can be used for weevil control.

Lime has been promoted for over 60 years by agricultural colleges. But always there seems to be some excuse for not using more. At first, farmers didn't believe lime would work. They had to be shown by research and demonstration.

The lime's poor physical condition plus the difficulties of hand spreading became common complaints. Bulk-spreading has eliminated muscle work and made application easy. Now, lack of money seems to be a common obstacle in spite of ACP assistance, at least to hear farmers talk. Bankers don't hold this opinion. In fact most of them welcome the opportunity to advance money for lime as well as fertilizer. They have even gone so far as to cooperate with state and federal agencies in promoting lime usage.

You've heard a lot about efficiency in the past few years and you'll be hearing plenty more. Lime is one of the most efficient investments you can make. Notice we say investment, for to say lime is a cash expense is to ignore about 90% of its value. A large part of lime's value is not realized the year of application, but is continued several years thereafter. And it pays dividends in more yield per acre.

Lime is an efficient way to use money for several reasons, one of them being that it "tarreches" the dollars spent for fertilizer. It's downright wasteful to buy fertilizer without using adequate lime. Experiment Station publications are filled with evidence that:

1. Lime increases the availability of phosphorus.

2. Lime favors the release of nitrogen from organic matter and manure.

3. Lime is essential to the fixation of nitrogen from air by legume bacteria.

5. Lime supplies calcium and magnesium, both required for production of all crops.

Thus, over a period of years almost every excuse for not using enough lime has been counteracted by colleges or industry. Yet lime use is still less then half of farm needs.

From May to late June, most farmers have more lush pastures than the cattle need. But from July through September, many farmers run short of grazing--if not in volume, at least in feed quality. Farmers can ease this situation by confining their cattle to an area they can graze down in a week to 10 days, advises W.C. Thompson, Specialist in Forages at the UK College of Agriculture.

In many instances, this maneuver will call for temporary fencing. Many farmers are using the surplus ungrazed area for highquality hay and silage. These cuttings are made in the early-bloom legume stages and before the grass seed heads are formed.

Mowing is just as important early in the season as late. Mowing will eliminate tall, mature plants that have been refused by livestock as well as destroy weeds. A good guide is to mow following each graze-off.

Dogrees offered at the University of Kentucky include Bachelors, Masters, Specialist in Education, Doctor of Education, Doctor of Dental Medicine, Doctor of Medicine, Doctor of Musical Arts in Music Teaching, Doctor of Pharmacy, Doctor of Philosophy, Doctor of Business Administration, and Juris Doctor.

Should We All Be One?

By DAVE LLEWELLYN

"Before I built a wall, I'd ask to know
What I was walling in, or walling out,
And to whom I was like to give offense.
Something there is that doesn't love a wall,
That wants it down."
—From "Mending Walls" by Robert Frost.

Walls are for privacy, for separation, for exclusion.

We wall ourselves in socially by homes and cars and clothing — and we do this equally rigidly, whether we are poor or rich.

We wall ourselves in personally by habits and prejudices that superficially assess and condemn other people.

We wall ourselves in psychologically by patterns of life, and self-criticism, and discouragement, which unfairly depress our potential.

When someone begins to wall himself in physically — by refusing to leave his neighborhood or home, or by locking himself away from others in his house or in his room — it is because he has already been imprisoned invisibly.

Most of us physically retreat from people only rarely, just long enough — into the office, or bedroom, or vacation — to regain our composure. Spiritually, however, our retreats from one another are more frequent — and, often, permanent.

Christian Unity Desirable

Vast segments of Christian society have walled themselves — "barricaded" might be more accurate — permanently away from other types of true believers. So they have become more "denominationalists" than Christians.

Ecumenism is not to be desired for the humanistic rationale under which it usually offered. Yet unity of the body of Christ is desirable.

Jesus' great prayer included: "I do not ask in behalf of these alone, but for those also who believe in Me through their word, that they may all be one." John 17:20, 21)

The earliest examples of denominational obstacles were between Jewish believers and Gentile believers. Their problem was little different from our problem today.

They were divided from each other by walls of "do's and don'ts," by invalid laws, just as we often fence ourselves in from profitable fellowship by laws which we have picked up, not from the Bible, but from our class culture.

Barrier Broken Down

Paul says, concerning such divisions, that Jesus "Himself is our peace. Who made both groups into one and broke down the barrier of the dividing wall." (Ephesians 2:14)

The proper basis of ecumenism is made clear in this Ephesians passage. Peace in the whole church is made "in Christ Jesus" and "by the blood of Christ" "by abolishing . . . the law", "by reconciling to God" — and not just to one another — "through the cross", "in one spirit" — the Holy Spirit — "having been built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets."

The New Testament laments the walls that believers have constructed between each other by artificial rules. It urges all believers to accept the whole teaching of the New Testament — to be "made one" "through Christ Jesus."

Sunday School Lesson for June 7, 1970

Send a letter to North Vietnam.

Right now hundreds of Americans are being held captive in North Vietnam.

A few prisoners have made it back. They talk about bamboo cages. Vicious beatings. Malnutrition. Humiliation.

But the North Vietnamese will tell us nothing. And it's this silence that makes our appeal more urgent.

For the families at home, there is no word on who's alive. Who's dead. Or even who's being held. There is nothing. Except the anguish of not knowing.

Maybe you can change this. By writing to the one man who can change it: The President of North Vietnam.

Ask him to release the names of prisoners, allow them to write to their families, and let the Red Cross inspect the prisons to insure proper medical treatment and living conditions.

Remind him that he is bound by the 1949 Geneva Convention which his country signed. And by the Istanbul resolution.

North Vietnamese leaders do care about American public opinion. And if they think they can gain something by bowing to it, they will.

But one letter won't do it. Or a thousand. Maybe it will take millions. So we've got to write now. All of us. And often.

Write a letter tonight. And send it to: Office of the President, Democratic Republic of Vietnam, Hanoi, North Vietnam.

It'll cost you a quarter. But it might save a life.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS +

Maybe they'll open it.
