My Neighbors

Springing up from the rich leaf mold of open woods and around old trees in apple orchards, this particular species of fungi is delicious when fried in butter or broiled over charcoal on an outdoor grill. It can also be dried or frozen for future use.

This morel grows about six inches high and has a hollow cap and stem covered with irregular pits and ridges, makes it appear as a piece of wrinkled, water-soaked tripe. Distinguished by these features, there is little chance of mistaking the morel for any other mushroom.

Although delicious, nutritionists say the food value of the morel has been exaggerated. Mushroom cultivators claim it has the food values of fish, but actually not. While having a much more pleasing taste, Indiana also used the morel in treating certain forms of "nervous affections," but modern medical science has found it to be of little importance in the practice of internal medicine.

Any day now morels may start pushing up from the leaf mold and it will not be gourmet alone who will avidly seek them out. Squirrels, chipmunks, skunks, and opossums also love this food from the wild. Each spring the competition is keen between these two groups as to which will find them first.

State Road Aid

Improvements. The 1970-71 fiscal allotment was announced recently at $146,300.

County Road Aid money has also increased significantly. For the 1967-68 fiscal year, Nicholas County received an allotment of only $47,793. The following fiscal year the allotment was $57,352. This fiscal year the allotment was $62,131. Another increase in funds is expected in next year's allotment soon to be announced. The increase since fiscal year 1967 has been approximately 50 per cent.

Commissioner of Highways Eugene Goss explained that the County Road Aid program and Rural Secondary program are two ways in which the state helps the counties meet their responsibility for county roads.

The significant increase in funds for county road programs is helping the counties to build and maintain a better road system, Goss said.

Kentucky Chamber President Issues Word Of Caution On Summer Hiring

There is a special need for business and industry to be vigilant during the next few months in the hiring of employees so as not to contribute to situations that will create unrest and criminal acts within the community.

This caution was issued recently by John T. Acree Jr., president of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce.

Acree said that several militant groups across the nation have advocated disruption of business and industry, as is evidenced by the recent bombings of offices, the destruction of equipment and records, and the disruption of stockholder meetings at various locations.

The Kentucky Chamber president stressed that it long has been the policy of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce to support vacation employment for students and others needing work and that this policy continues. The worthy seeker of employment should be given all due consideration, said the business leader.

Acree pointed out that many things can be done by the employer to help prevent organized trouble in the plant. Among those he listed, heightened security in offices and plants, improved relationship with employees, coordinated action among employers, demonstrated community benefits of private enterprise, programs to stimulate and challenge youth, consultation with law enforcement, legal and insurance advisors. The Kentucky Chamber of Commerce recently issued to its members a set of guidelines for constructing the promoters and users of violence.
