Census A Time For Americans To Take A Close Look At Themselves

Every 10 years Americans take a good look at themselves to force the platform of facts on which the nation is to be built for the future course of the Nation.

The occasion is the census of population and housing conducted once each decade as required by the Constitution. The 1970 is a series stretching back to 1790 when the first census was taken in April, 1790.

Responsible for the census is the Bureau of Census, U.S. Department of Commerce. The 1970 census will be conducted from 395 temporary Bureau district offices throughout the United States, each of which will cover an area containing approximately 500,000 persons.

District offices began opening on Jan. 19, with the entire group scheduled to be in operation by Feb. 9.

The census tells us what we are as a Nation and is a necessary part of the government's planning for a practical future, busy in the result of our concerns, and we need a careful look at ourselves at regular intervals. The census will throw light on all the changes that have taken place in recent years.

For the average American, the census will be a simple exercise. The government asks that he devote a few minutes to answer questions about himself and his household. The questions will be on forms that will be sent by mail to each household.

Changes in census taking methods have been made since the first census in 1790 which was taken on April 1, 1790.
