

A Heartening Development

The U.S. Department of Justice and Attorney General John Mitchell are to be congratulated for taking the initiative to bring the leaders of the extremist, violent "Weathermen" movement into the so-called SDS - Students for a Democratic Society.

It is well to note that although they travel under the banner of "peace", all of the accused are 21 years of age or over - and that none of them are legitimate "students." Mark Rudd, the national secretary of SDS and leader of the Weatherman faction, is 22 years of age, so are Jeffrey Jones, Terry Robbins, Linda Evans, John Jacobs and Lawrence Weiss. The "veterans" of the movement, Bernardine Dohrn and Kathy Boudin are 27 and 26 years of age, respectively. The youngest SDS activist to be indicted was Judy Clark, 21; others include John Jacobs, Howard Machtinger, Michael Spiegel, and William Ayres, all over 21.

The federal grand jury indictment charges that the SDS leaders conspired together "for the purpose of and in order to encourage and induce persons to travel to Chicago in 1969, and to participate in massive and violent riots, and other activities" and that they further conspired to obstruct the Mercury, but that instructions were given in technical violation of the law, all obstructing police; karate; in methods of freeing arrested persons; and organizing "affinity groups" for the purpose of committing acts of violence against policemen, persons who are guilty specifically under the law cited by the Department of Justice is, of course, a matter for the courts to determine. That actual acts of violence occurred in Chicago there can be no question. Windows were smashed, private automobiles were destroyed, and there were thousands and one case of vandalism. Whether or not the SDS leaders are guilty specifically under the law cited by the Department of Justice is, of course, a matter for the courts to determine. The indictment itself, however, should serve notice on Chicago that acts of violence as in Chicago in 1969, are not to be lightly condoned in the future.

LETTERS

Editor, The Carlisle Mercury:

I was not my intention to cancel my subscription to the Mercury, but Ted and I went out in Denver, Colorado and Major Park, Calif. all during the month of April when we were celebrating our Golden Wedding - rather our children and grandchildren had gathered from the four corners to give us a grand reception which lasted about a week. I am enclosing clipping from the Mercury County (Ohio) which says Sorry there was no mention made of the wedding taking place May 7, 1920 in Carlisle at St. Johns Church on East Main. But these good people in Northwestern Ohio (when Kentucky is mentioned) think it is Louisville, the City Old Kentucky Home, and the horse farms around Lexington. I'll tell them there is ever so much more to the State. Well, I guess I haven't been very successful in selling them my native state. Love D'.

I would like Lewis Scott to know I enjoy every item he sends to your paper. Makes me feel as if I have had a visit and chat with Frank and John Mattias.

Ted would like me to mention that his father was recently honored as "Educator, Inventor and Major" at a dinner and admitted to Ohio's Hall of Fame. Mattias for his contribution to American industry. He is a member of the company which has become the largest manufacturer of wire implements in the State of Ohio.

I am enclosing a check for my subscription, I have no living relatives in Nicholas County, but I have a few in the "old state" - and I enjoy the paper.

MERCURY VAPOURS

By Warren R. Fisher

During this graduating season, I think the following which was first published in the Mercury and reviewed by Warren R. Fisher, worthy of printing under our Mercury Vapours heading:

"Now I am only 18 years old and there are still a great many things about the world that I don't understand, but there are a few simple truths in my mind, and these I wish to share with you. I think my life is in line with the ideals which I think make it important to be an American."

"THIS I BELIEVE: It was the idea of free enterprise conducted freely and without undue hindrance which made it possible for this country to get ahead through individual imagination, intelligence and industry."

"THIS I BELIEVE: That America grew from the great country it is today through positive constructive action by all people in the society."

"THIS I BELIEVE: America is a nation for all people who want to be involved and work hard to make democracy work... who want to make their own lives better and see their nation great by the sweat of their brows."

"THIS I BELIEVE: American business has played a vital role in helping this country free ahead and that American business will continue to carry on in great tradition and take an even greater role in keeping the American society strong."

"THIS I BELIEVE: America will remain a great nation as long as her people do not forget that the ideals of dignity, honor, pride of accomplishment and respect for the rights of men for all men and all ages are the very things which have made and still make this country strong."

FRANKFORT: The political poll sponsored by allies of U.S. Senator James H. Eastland, members of Gov. Louie B. Nunn's Republican ticket, and a host of other potential candidates, there has been some talk that he is willing to give up his seat for a potential candidate, James H. Eastland, who has been named by the governor as his potential successor.

The governor had earlier indicated that he would support a potential candidate, James H. Eastland, who has been named by the governor as his potential successor.

The difference isn't much considering the fact that Combs has not announced his preference for the post.

When the two Democrats were projected against Combs in the poll, the Kraft organization's report indicated that Combs is not well known to the voters, but the GOP nomination and an active campaign was underway.

highlight of the whole thing. Having a doctor come to your home made you something of a celebrity in your neighborhood.

After a few impressive ubahs, the doc would dip into his pocket for a bottle of colored pills. He never bothered to explain the disease or how long the patient might live, if he lived.

The doctor comes to see them only to verify their diagnosis and pick up a little experience to use as a doctor. The doctor might just as well be old but he is not a television.

I've seen an old man dream of becoming a doctor. He had a dream of becoming a doctor. He had a dream of becoming a doctor. He had a dream of becoming a doctor.

With cholesterol clogging my pipes, stentimon-90 chewing at my bone marrow, borax rinsing my joints, the radium dial of my wrist watch contaminating my personality, I'm around about the government's anti-smoking campaign just enough to say, "So what else is new?"

Time was when there was a certain amount of respect in getting sick. Neighbors and relatives would come in, bring food and tonic, and you could lean all the news and old remedies.

If the patient didn't get well and died in the bed, you could figure he was being treated to call a doctor. And this was the

THE PLEDTYPER

A noted editor once told me that he advised his students, who were ready to go out into the world, with this bit of information: 45% of your salary will be based on your ability to listen, and 35% of your salary will be based on your ability to communicate.

However, he was saved by fast thinking. He would board his dead subjects and he would half dozen or so and then in the night place them in the WCTU Fountain, a large water-worn statue dedicated to the good of joyous beverage habits.

The most amusing incident would write an editorial denouncing the stinking rumors who had again desecrated the town's symbol of sobriety for a loaded party. Don't letters from the Deceased ladies and from his aunt, an extra helping of pie for a mood.

One day a packet of publicity for a "dry" speaker arrived at his door. It was a full-length picture of the speaker.

The editor snipped the picture in half at the waistline. The rest of the picture was gone. Under the torso it said "continued on page eight." And there, sure enough on the bottom page, was the rest of the picture.

And, like a 5000 thinking artist, the editor was first in denouncing the picture. The editor didn't mention time for thinking to his students, he didn't want them to get into trouble like he.

Nothing amazes me more than the cheap, artificial kissing seen constantly on television. Even a personality is introduced to the television audience, he rubs in and makes a bee-line for every female on stage to slobber and kiss.

On the street, this is called molesting. On stage it is the highest compliment. The fact that the liars are old friends, have rehearsed
