Pollution Contest Deadline Dec. 1

The deadline for principals in Kentucky to submit their schools' winning entries in the 1970 Conservation Essay Contest is Tuesday, Dec. 1.

The contest, open to all students in Kentucky schools, is a public service program of The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times. The subject of this year's contest is "Pollution—Its Effect on My Community."

Principals should send their respective school's top essays to the office of their respective school system superintendent where they will be processed and forwarded for district judging. Soil and Water Conservation offices in each county will conduct the district judging.

District winners will receive a $25 U.S. Savings Bond and a plaque from the contest sponsor. District runners-up and school winners will receive certificates.

The best essay in each of Kentucky's 121 Soil and Water Conservation districts will be judged for state awards. First place will earn a $300 U.S. Savings Bond, second place a $200 bond, and third place a $100 bond.

The three state winners, their parents and teachers will be honored guests at the annual Farm Awards Luncheon in Louisville on Feb. 27 where the top prizes will be awarded.

Christmas Greetings To Boys in Vietnam

Governor Louie B. Nunn asks for your help in compiling a current mailing list of names and addresses of boys in this area that are now serving our country in Viet Nam.

Governor Nunn feels that we can not let the Christmas Season go by without at least trying to contact as many of our boys as possible to commend them on the job they are doing and let them know that they are not being forgotten by the people of Kentucky.

If any parent, wife, sweetheart, or relative will mail address of those now serving in Viet Nam, the local Selective Service Board will forward same to the Governor's office.

Test for Glaucoma Every Two Years

A screening for the eye disease glaucoma at the recent U.S. Conference of Mayors in Denver turned up five cases registering "suspectious," reports the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. Denver ophthalmologists, including Dr. J. Leonard Swager, father of the astronaut, screened 169 mayors and their aides.

Because glaucoma, the second leading cause of blindness in the U.S., progresses slowly and painlessly, the victim rarely knows he has it. But early discovery and prompt medical care can halt the progress of glaucoma. Those five "suspectious" cases among the mayor's group were referred for a complete medical eye examination.

The screening, taking only a few minutes' time, is done with a tonometer, an instrument which the ophthalmologist uses to measure the level of pressure within the eyeball. Elevated pressure is the criterion usually associated with glaucoma.

The National Society has found that some 25 of persons 35 years and older screened for glaucoma will be found positive upon referral and subsequent ophthalmological examination. As evidenced by screenings at the American Medical Association conventions, the Society has found that even among physicians, who are expected to be "medically aware," a number proportionate to those found in public screenings will register screening results "suspectious" of glaucoma. It is the Society's hope that those mayors tested will bring their "glaucoma awareness" home to their communities, as a boost to national educational efforts aimed at early discovery of glaucoma.

Since glaucoma most often strikes after age 35, individuals in this age category are advised to have medical eye examinations every two years. Screenings, conducted by the National Society and its state affiliates in communities across the country, are an important aid in early discovery of glaucoma.

Arrangements for the mayors' screening were handled by the National Society's affiliate, the CoGrads Society for the Prevention of Blindness. The screening room was adjacent to the Denver Hilton's Grand Ballroom, the main conference room for the mayors' meetings.

With or without seeds, the equivalent of a 14-pound slice of watermelon will be eaten, on the average, by every American this year, the Department of Agriculture predicts.

Mann Second Runner-Up

Mann represented Kentucky in the speech contest and was declared the winner. His speech was entitled, "Youth's Place in America."

Mann was also elected "Mr. Pizazz," the most covered award other than the Mr. Personality award. "Mr. Pizazz" is chosen by fellow participants as the person depicting the ideal personality, good character and good overall sportsmanship in the contest.

Mann is married to the former Nancy Lamb of Danville, and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Mann, and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Victory Day, Carlisle.

Fillers

The average person refers to north on a map as "up," but residents of Main still call their rocky coastline Down East. The term is a carry-over from sailing days, when ships from Maine sailed up to Boston, then coasted home before southwesterly winds on a "downhill run," explains the National Geographic Society's book, "Vacationland U.S.A."

Canadian researchers have launched balloons in efforts to keep birds away from fields of experimental hybrid corn. Artificial hawks glide beneath the balloons to frighten away blackbirds.

Dolly Madison loved to wear bejeweled turbans, use snuff, play cards for money, and entertain 15 or 20 people at dinner, National Geographic says. She was one of the most popular First Ladies in American history.

4 UK Journalists Get Scholarships
