Kay's Kitchen

By Kay Fisher

S.O.S. HELP--HELP

I need a candy recipe, Commercially they are called "Turtles," I think of "Pollyowgs." A soft caramel center with pecans around it in large pieces then covered with chocolate.

Here we are again, that last out-door get-together with the family and friends--Labor Day. So out with the grill, charcoal and hamburgers or prepare ahead and serve picnic style. Whatever the case, stay in your own backyard or a favorite nearby picnic area. You will be more relaxed and rested and a whole lot safer.

Fill your ice chest the evening before or early in the morning with your favorite beverages so you will have plenty of chilled drinks.

If you are going to cook out, for a change have chuck steaks or minute steaks. Use your favorite marinade or try this one. I think this one is extra good. This recipe makes enough for about 4 or 5 lbs. of meat. If you are using minute steaks, you should have some left for another time. Just refrigerate.

MARINADE FOR STEAK

1/3 cup salad oil
1/2 cup Burgundy
medium sweet onion (thinly sliced)
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon thyme
1 garlic clove minced
1 bay leaf
8 whole black pepper corns
1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce

Combine ingredients, place steaks in shallow dish and pour marinade over steaks. Cover with Saran or foil. Refrigerate for 24 hours, turning meat several times.

TO COOK: Place chuck steaks on grill about 4 inches from heat. Cook about 15 or 20 minutes on each side, depending on thickness of steaks, brushing several times while cooking with the marinade. Of course, for "Minute Steaks" it will be just that. However do brush them with the marinade even if it is just when you are taking them from the grill.

VEGETABLES

The grill is hot so let everyone get into the act, and each one cook his own vegetables to the point in making one person do it all.

Parboil whole medium onions, potatoes and carrots cut in 1 1/2 inch pieces. (You can parboil all these together in one sauce pan.) Have Zucchini and other squash cut in about 1 inch pieces, mushrooms, small tomatoes, and green peppers. You may use any vegetable that cooks quickly. Place the vegetables that you want on a long skewer and brush with the meat marinade.

If the children would rather have "hot dogs" let them grill their own and have plenty of pork and beans, mustard and pickles for them.

If you feel a salad is necessary, have a vegetable one that keeps well.

Now if you really want to spend a lazy day of just "sitting" in the sun or fishing, swimming or sailing, fix food enough to last thru the evening meal and forget all about it. With coolers and ice chests and buckets you don't have to worry about spoilage in one afternoon and evening.

For that kind of day you can't beat fried chicken and cold cuts, plenty of ham and pimento cheese sandwiches, potato salad, baked beans, potato or macaroni salad and deviled eggs. Don't forget cookies!

Have plenty of good snappy cheese cut in squares, crackers, potato chips and pickles.

Don't forget paper cups, paper plates, plastic forks, and small dishes. Be sure you can't find the small paper dishes for salad, a paper cup works fine, so have plenty of them on hand.

These things I remember about picnics as a child. My mother always cut the crusts from the sandwiches and cut them in half. They were not wrapped individually but each kind wrapped in a linen napkin that had been wrung out in cold water then folded carefully to keep them moist. Of course now we have a number of things we can roll off to wrap, I can't remember what they were in, but there were always clean, cool, damp wash cloths for dirty hands, instead of trees or just to wipe a hot and furrowed brow.

So you take several along. A plastic refrigerator dish with tight fitting top would be perfect. (Want to know what happened to the bread crusts? They were dried in the oven later with ends of bread, rolled with a rolling pin and stored in a jar with tight fitting lid and used for topping on vegetables and meat dishes.)

Would you believe it. I do the same thing now. You would be surprised at how many recipes call for dry bread crumbs.

To get back on the subject-- DESSERT

Serve a good size chilled watermelon.
