

April 18-24 is Library Week

April 18-24 is National Library Week. Do you really know what can be found in your public library?

Local support is enthusiastically given to our state and federal help. State and federal librarians in Kentucky are administered by the Kentucky Department of Libraries.

Go into your library and take a look at what is there. Few people realize that many of our libraries have a carefully selected by a professional staff of the Department of Libraries.

Books are not the only materials found in our libraries. There are also recordings and framed paintings ready to take home.

Microfilm, microfilm, film strips, tapes as well. Many libraries are proud of our libraries here in Kentucky.

For librarians of their size, there are few better in the United States. One reason for this is the broad range of services offered.

For material which cannot be located in the local library, the Department of Libraries maintains a large collection of books, periodicals, and films. This collection is used almost entirely by local libraries.

A network of library services is being developed by the Department of Libraries to make the maximum material available to local citizens.

Ask your librarian a difficult question and see how the system works. You may be surprised to find the answers waiting for you.

Get the habit of using the library—not only for personal or business reasons, but also for answers to the problems of drug abuse, pollution control, energy, consumer protection and hundreds of other vital matters.

Our libraries can help us in the good things of this world for ourselves and our children. Good will is not enough. Today we must have knowledge—the right knowledge at the right time.
