A DAY TO HONOR AMERICA

The 4th of July weekend offers time for a taste of recreation, a bit of fun popping off fire-works, maybe a thought or two about that old-fashioned virtue patriotism, and innovative ways A HONOR AMERICA

Pondering over patriotism—real patriotism—we inevitably reach the conclusion that this —we inevitably reach the conclusion that this country just didn't happen to flourish. Much of the toil and struggle that helped make the United States strong and free represented some-one's contribution in self-sacrifice, either in peace or in war.

Carrying this train of thought a bit further, many of us can't ignore the indications that America didn't wax robust from material sources alone. The idea of reverence for a Supreme Being is intertwined with the nation's development since the day the country was founded 195 years ago.

On this comfortable, lazy weekend, the

of this commortable, lazy weekend, the churches and synagogues will have their doors open as usual on the Sabbath. If we juggled the family schedule a bit, and perhaps arranged the family picnic or golf date or trip to the beach an hour later, we could slip into our chosen church or temple and listen to the men in the pulpits reading the Scriptures and discussing the truths that weathered the test of time for centuries before 1776.

Obviously, most of us are aware—often, we're not allowed to forget—that separation of Chárch and State is a fundamental principle in the United States. This premise in an official sense, and undoubtedly has secred the nation away from some grave pitfalls. But individually, throughout the country's history most leaders have been influenced by the Judaco-Christian ethics. The source of the Ludaco-Christian ethics. The source of the

So the idea of a religious observance on pendence Day weekend assumes validity. Both Church and State today are conlidity. Both: Church and State today are con-fronted with new preplexities that the Found-ing Fathers never dreamed of. Consequently, religious bodies are assuming increasingly activist roles.

The questions leap out at us. What can we do about peace in Vietnam and the world?

Threats to the environment? Drug addiction and distillusioned youth! Dauksariage diministry and distillusioned youth! Dauksariage diministry (Education?

These problems cry out for innovative ap-proaches and hard work. Perhaps, as has been proaches and hard work. Perhaps, as has been said about New York's vast, interrelated diffi-culties, they can't really be solved, but must be managed. On the other hand, maybe you hold the magic key to certain solutions.

There is an ironic footnote to current religious activism. Karl Marx contended that organized religions — particularly Christianity — discount of the problem at verted man's attention from the problems at hand by insisting that suffering was mankind's lot on earth and salvation could be found only

But events in recent years have shown that religion is abandoning this ostrich posture and is trying to cope with temporal affairs. There is om for you to share in these programs.

Theologian Paul Hillich observed that in weighing the price of space exploration, with its effect upon social prierities, a tendency toward cynicism often follows. "These spiritual factors, however," he continued, "should never lead to however," becontinued, "should never lead to a decision to give up either the production of technical tools or attempts to penetrate into outer-terrestial spaces... For danger is not a reason to prevent life from actualizing its potentialities."

And in this matter of priorities, let's make a list of our own. Putting first things first, the allotting of some time for religious contemplate.
