An Asian Munich?

President Nixon's announcement that he will journey to Peking to meet with Red China's rulers has sent shock waves of dismay through the ranks of realists in the nation's capital. Sen. John G. Tower (R-Texas) has said that "the President owes the American people an explanation."

The anger and astonishment voiced in realist circles stems from the conviction that the President's trip will do these things: 1) legitimatize the aggressor regime in Peking; 2) enable the Chinese communists to forge new political and economic ties to weak Third World nations; and 3) result in the humiliation of the United States throughout the Orient.

The third point is perhaps the most serious. In Asia, "face" is all-important. Asians undoubtedly will regard the Nixon journey to the Chinese Communist capital as evidence that the United States has been humbled in the Vietnam War. They will also regard the trip as proof that the United States is, as Mao Tse-tung has been saying for years, a "paper tiger."

Furthermore, if Mr. Nixon wanted to meet with the rulers of Red China, he could have offered to meet them on neutral territory--in Geneva, Burma or elsewhere. But no, he did not hold out for that. Instead, he is making the journey to the capital of the aggressor, exactly as Neville Chamberlain, the British Prime Minister of the 1930's who pledged "peace in our time," journeyed to Munich to seek normal relations with Nazi Germany. The Munich journey was a humiliation for Great Britian and encouraged Hitler in his aggression. Tragically, Mr. Nixon's journey to Peking is likely to encourage Mao Tse-tung in his aggressive designs, confirming his oft-stated belief that the United States is decadent and weak.

Realists also are dismayed that Mr. Nixon would handle such a momentous change of national policy in such a secretive manner, employing his controversial special assistant--Dr. Henry Kissinger--as a negotiator.

On Capitol Hill, specialists in communist affairs are wondering what secret understandings may have been reached between Dr. Kissinger and Red Chinese Premier Chow En-lai. These specialists doubt that the communists would have gone along with the Nixon plan for a meeting without assurances on substantive matters.

It also is noted here that Mr. Nixon previously refused to allow Dr. Kissinger to be quizzed by congressional committees, claiming executive privilege. Had Secretary of State William P. Rogers been sent to Peking, tradition would have required that he appear before the appropriate Senate committees to answer questions. The specialists also point out that the secret negotiations in Peking are contrary to American diplomatic tradition. For years, Americans have opposed secret agreements, secretly arrived at. Realists note that one secret meeting with a communist leader--President Roosevelt's meeting with Dictator Stalin at Yalta--led to the betrayal of the peoples of Eastern Europe--the peoples in the now captive nations.

Of special concern is the impact of the planned journey on the future of Japan. Only a few weeks ago, Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird urged Japan to expand its armed forces and assume a bigger share of the defense burden in Asia. Now Mr. Nixon is promoting "more normal relations" between Red China and the United States. Indeed President Nixon's statement in effect suggests that Red China isn't an enormous threat. Certainly, there is little reason why Japan should rearm if the United States is going to reach an accommodation with Peking. It seems likely, in fact, that the Nixon journey could set the stage for the emergence of a left-oriented government in Japan, a government determined to play ball--at least ping pong--with Peking. Indonesia's great struggle to throw off Peking's influence also is undermined by the Nixon announcement. The lesser states of Asia may well ask themselves why they should struggle to resist Red China's influence if the United States is to retreat from its policy of resistance to Peking.

In general, realists believe that the Nixon announcement--regarded as a political end-run around the "peace" bloc--is the most serious mistake in U.S. foreign policy since the end of World War II and threatens the cause of freedom. The feeling among realistic observers is that the Nixon trip will create a state of euphoria in the country that will cause Americans to be psychologically unprepared for danger, precisely as Neville Chamberlain's journey to Munich came close to costing the British people their liberties and survival.

Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q) I don't have the money to pay all that I owe on my third quarter estimated tax. Can I pay part now and the rest next time?

A) You may have to pay a penalty based on a 6 percent annual rate if your payments are not made in full when they are due. To avoid the penalty, your estimated tax installments must be paid on time and should amount to at least 80 percent of your income tax when your return for the year is filed. Farmers and fishermen can avoid this penalty if their payments equal 66⅔ percent of their total tax liability.

Q) I used an employment agency to get my job. Are the fees I paid deductible?

A) Yes, if you itemize expenses this will be deductible. If a job was not secured, the fees are nondeductible.

Q) I work part-time as a maid. How can I tell if social security is being paid for me?

A) Ask your employer whether these taxes are being paid for you. Employers are required to file a return and pay social security taxes for household employees when cash wages of $50 or more are paid to an employee during any calendar quarter. Employers are also required to provide employees with an annual statement of wages paid and social security taxes withheld.

A full statement of your Social Security coverage may be obtained by writing the Social Security Administration, Baltimore, Md. 21235. Give your name, address and social security number when you write.

Q) My son has earned almost $600 this year. If he makes any more will I lose his exemption?

A) If your son is either under 19 at the end of the year or a full-time student for at least five months during the year, the amount of his earnings will not affect his status as your dependent. The other dependency tests, support for instance, must continue to be met.

Q) I took a loss when I sold some stock I inherited. Can I deduct this on my return?

A) If you sold the stock for less than its fair market value on the date of the decedent's death then you are entitled to either a short or long term capital loss depending on how long you owned the stock beginning with the date of death. Anything over six months would be a long term loss.

Q) The bank where my daughter opened up a savings account wants her social security number. Where can she get one?

A) Your daughter may apply for a social security number by filing out Form SS-5 which may be obtained from your local Social Security or IRS office. Banks and other financial institutions are required by law to report certain dividend and interest payments by the identifying number of the recipient.

Forecasters predict freezing temperatures by previous records

When Kentucky's amateur weather forecasters start checking "woolly worms," "cocklebburrs, and horse hair, one thing is certain--winter's on the way!

And, at this time of year, experts at the Weather Service Office for State Climatology at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture make some predictions about cold weather, too. But their information comes from temperature records kept for many years at various locations in Kentucky.

This scientific "prediction" gives the percent probability of freezing temperatures before certain dates in different Kentucky communities, as well as the average date in each location of the season's first temperature drop to 32 degrees or below.

For example, at Shelbyville, there's a 10 percent chance (one chance in ten) that the thermometer will drop to 32 degrees or below before Oct. 15, and a 90 percent chance before Oct. 30. In other Lexington suburbs, usually hit by freezing temperatures before the end of October, with Oct. 15 the average date of the first thermometer reading there of 32 or below.

These odds are based on temperatures in a standard U.S. Weather Service shelter at eye level (about five feet above ground) and a representative exposure. Lower temperatures sometimes occur nearer the ground or in local areas subject to air drainage.

Here are the chances for freezing temperature in your area (the average date of the first freezing temperature reading of the season is shown in the 50 percent column):

Use Grandma's methods to restore iron cookware

Lexington, Ky.--Grandmother's trusty iron skillet never gave her any grief. She used it every day, washed it with her home-made soap, dried it, greased it with lard, and hung it by the stove until the next meal.

Then why does iron cookware so often present problems for her granddaughter? Because she tucks it in the dishwasher, washes it with detergent, and leaves it to soak in the sink or to air-dry in the dish-drain.

All of these are no-no's, according to Florence Parker, UK Extension home management specialist. Detergent draws grease out of the pores of the cookware and causes food to stick. Rust quickly forms if ironware is left to soak or to dry by itself.

Take your care cues from Grandma and that iron skillet may become one of your favorite utensils, too. It heats evenly, holds heat longer than most metals, and foods just won't burn easily.

If foods are sticking, treat ("reason") the skillet by greasing generously with unsalted fat--such as Crisco, Spry or Snowdrift--and leave it in a 200-degree oven for several hours. Give it a thorough scouring, first, especially if it's rusty.

From now on, wash it by hand with soap, and dry it immediately. If you're storing it for long in humid weather, Mrs. Parker advises wiping it with unsalted fat to avoid possible rusting. Unsalted fat does a better long-term job of protecting the iron than bacon grease or other fats which contain salt. You'll need to reseason it from time to time if food starts sticking again.

Many old, neglected skillets will have a thick crust on the bottom. To remove this, soak paper towelling or old cloths in ammonia, wrap around skillet and place in a plastic bag, making it as airtight as possible. Leave overnight, or at least 12 hours. Follow this up with a steel-wool scouring. One such treatment will usually do the job.
