Emberton team to visit here

Tom Emberton will bring his campaign for Governor to Nicholas County on Friday, Sept. 10, as part of his statewide CARE-o-van designed to take him to all of Kentucky's counties by mid-September.

Tom Emberton

Emberton will be accompanied here by Ken Harper, candidate for Secretary of State; Bob Miller, candidate for State Auditor; and Doug Moseley, candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals.

The nominee for Governor is waging a "people to people" campaign and he emphasized that he planned to see as many people as possible during his visit here. "We are interested in serving ALL the people of Kentucky," Emberton said.

Emberton said he was discussing the problems of the state and proposed solutions with the people of Kentucky and noted that one major concern he hears is "the five per cent tax on groceries." He added, "I strongly believe that the people of Kentucky should not have to pay a tax on a necessity of life and I am committed to the removal of the tax on food if elected."

He added that he was opposed to any new taxes on the people of Kentucky.

Lewis countian's book important to genealogists

By Helen Price Stacy

West Liberty—It was through William M. Talley's column "Answers to Questions" in The Lewis County Herald, published at Vanceburg, Ky., that I found the interesting story of Shaw's Paradise, a tract of land in the area that had been made into a botanical garden complete with experimental laboratory, which had become virtually lost in the intervening years.

Not long ago I learned that Talley researched history not only for his popular column but also for future inclusion in books. I now own a copy of "Talley's North-eastern Kentucky Papers," a 568-page hardback crammed with dates, names and history that would be a delight to genealogists and families who want to locate missing links in their ancestry.

Talley says the purpose of his book is to collect in one volume a great number of facts and records that will be invaluable to researchers.

"These records are in no particular order," he said, "but pertain to families in several North-eastern Kentucky counties, primarily Fleming, Lewis, Nicholas, Greenup, Carter, Morgan and Rowan."

Dr. Talley spends summers at his Lewis County home, 108 Main Street, Vanceburg, but other times lives at No. 2, Cinnadale Terrace, Ste. Anne de Bellefleur, Quebec, Canada, and teaches at McGill University, Montreal.

The book contains a complete history of Lewis County written some time ago by W.C. Dugan, who included records of taverns, weekly early-day hotels of the area. His records show the government had set certain rates that tavern owners had to charge for services rendered. A warm breakfast cost the customer, while a cold breakfast was only 17 cents; the same rates applied to fried meals, hot and cold. For a clean sheet, the cost was eight cents per night.

An oil boom created much excitement in Vanceburg and every body was going to find oil in their back yard," wrote Dugan. A two-story tavern was built and named "The Petroleum House" by proprietor Seth Parker.

There also was the Beverly House, and according to the historian, every tavern or hotel had a barroom in a separate building nearby.

At this time the legislature enacted a law that stated all barrooms to old wells in Rowan, Greenup and Carter counties and deeds in Fleming County.

The will of Benjamin Fuller of Philadelphia, Pa., dated Dec. 26, 1777, included a bequest of 10,000 acres in Kentucky, which he purchased from Wynkoop and Watson in 1772. The will mentions two precincts. Moorefield—Precinct composed of: Manlius Shop and Mary Barterville and East Union—10 am. as the date and time for the election of registered Democrats to fill vacancies in five precincts.

VEE clinics Sept. 11 and 15

The Nicholas County Committee to plan the Horse Vaccination Program for Venezuelan Equine Encephalomyelitis (VEE) has announced that two clinics will be held.

The first will be Saturday, Sept. 11 from 10 to 12 o'clock and from 1 to 3 in the afternoon at the Nicholas County Recreation Park on the East Union Road in Carlisle.

The second clinic will be on Saturday, Sept. 25. All horse owners who can bring their animals to the clinic are asked to do so. It is important that they call Dr. Noll (280-5990) at least one day in advance so that enough vaccine will be on hand for the clinics.

All horses, ponies, mules, donkeys and burros, regardless of age or sex are eligible for vaccination. Vaccination will also be done on the farm for those who cannot make it to a clinic. On the farm vaccination will be done by private arrangement with Dr. Noll for large numbers and by rural routes for all others starting with Route 1 on about Sept. 15. Vaccination is on about Sept. 15. Vaccination is on about Sept. 15.

All those who have reported their horses to the County agent will be notified of the day on which vaccinations will be done on their farm. These people are also asked to inform their neighbors who may have horses and not reported them.

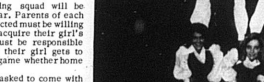

It is important that the vaccine must be picked up in Mt. Sterling in the morning and must be used within 12 hours. It is also important that all animals be put up in a sturdy enclosure of some sort before the veterinarian arrives so he can stay on schedule. Someone should be present to represent the owner and furnish information for the vaccination certificate.

It is hoped that as many animals as possible will be vaccinated under this program to help control the spread of VEE. It is a serious and often fatal disease of horses. It also affects people, producing a sickness similar to a severe case of the flu. Some human deaths have been reported. The vaccine has been approved by the USDA as being safe for all equines and effective in most cases for at least one year.

The committee, composed of Dr. James Noll, Johnny White and Paul Hoffinger, stated that officials predict that it will probably spread throughout the U.S. during the next year. The program is being conducted by the USDA in cooperation with the State Department of Agriculture, University of Kentucky Extension Service and the Public Health Department to protect humans as well as the horse industry in Kentucky.

Special guests, in addition to prospective members, were state Jaycee officers Don Stephens, Lexington, general vice-president of the Kentucky Jaycees; Mike Mangot, Covington, Kentucky, District Director for Region Four; and Rudy Dunigan, Lexington, C vice-president, from Stanton.
