Fort Knox officers visit National Guards

The Department of Military Affairs, Frankfort, recently hosted a one-day visit of 24 officers from Fort Knox and National Guards units in Frankfort.
Col. William R. Buntin Jr., The Deputy Adjutant General, stated that, "The program is a big success. We look forward to doing this for more classes."
The Officers' Armored Officer Basic Course students, who are to be assigned to reserve units after finishing the course, were given an opportunity to acquaint them with their roles in National Guard and Reserve Units.

Upon arrival, they were given a briefing on the Organization of the Kentucky Army National Guard, and how it functions, and training. After the briefing, they visited three installations: the Frankfort Boone National Guard Center, the U.S. Property and Fiscal Office, and the U.S. Property and Fiscal Office where budgeting and accounting data processing procedures, utilized among the units of the State, were explained.

At the Combined Field Maintenance Shop, they observed maintenance on all types of equipment. The last activity visited was the Army National Guard Aviation Facility where the role of Army Aviation in the Guard was explained. They were then flown back to Fort Knox in the Guards "Hoys."
