Industrial arts project pays-off

What started as an industrial education project in school is becoming a money-making invention for John Ponsoll, a recent graduate of Morehead State University.

"One of my class projects last year required me to design an item that could be used in a shop," said Ponsoll, a native of Warren, Pa. "Instead of just drafting a design, I decided to build a portable work area."

"I wanted to make a workbench that also could be used as a storage area," he said. "I liked my finished product better than anything I'd seen in the catalogs."

Ponsoll, who now teaches industrial arts at a junior high school in Belleville, Md., mentioned his graduate project to friends who suggested that he try to market the idea.

A Roanoke, Va. firm liked his sketches of the working area and paid to have his original model shipped from Morehead to their offices.

"They completely disassembled my work bench and carefully measured every screw and piece of wood," Ponsoll said. "The firm offered to completely buy my idea, but I decided to retain the rights and receive a fee for each one they sell."

The firm is marketing the product as a "portable experience center". The model on the market is primarily for elementary school shops but can be adapted for other uses such as art classes, home economics classes or various repair tasks.

It is 30 inches wide and five feet long when closed and opens to a five feet by five feet working area. The top folds in to conceal a tool console storage area and folds out to provide two work surfaces. When closed it looks like an ordinary work table.

"This center provides a tool display area, a supply storage area and a portable, convenient work surface, all in one," Ponsoll said.

"I'm really glad to see my idea accepted by a major firm," Ponsoll said. "They are featuring the work experience center at various shows throughout the country and orders are beginning to come in."

"I had no idea that one of my classes at Morehead State would lead to this," he said. "I'm glad I decided to build it instead of only making a sketch."

Ponsoll, who studied as an MSU graduate assistant in recreation and received a master's from MSU last spring, will be returning on several other ideas which might have commercial potential.

Indian fort theatre gets face lifting

By the time Paul Green's outdoor musical drama "Wilderness Road" opens June 29 in Berea, Indian Fort Theatre will have received a face lifting that will make it one of the finest theatres anywhere in the country. Originally built for the first "Wilderness Road" drama in 1955, the theatre was acclaimed for its natural beauty and perfect acoustical quality. Situated in the thick Berea College Forest at the base of Indian Fort Mountain, the theatre was the home of Green's prize winning drama for four seasons during which nearly 162,000 people attended the productions.

As is true of most things, time has had a noticeable effect on the theatre. Used only sparingly for graduation ceremonies, a few festivals, and an occasional dramatic production, the theatre has suffered some of the wrinkles and cracks that are an inevitable part of the aging process, but now all of that is being mended and then some. The entire area of Indian Fort Theatre is undergoing a complete renovation that extends from the picnic areas and winding trails in the forest to the playing areas of the vast stage in the theatre itself. New split rail fences line the path that leads to the amphitheatre; the seating area is being repaired; the entire enclosed shelter area, dressing rooms, scene design shops, concession stands, and rest rooms are all being renovated. Plans are also underway for an improved and expanded parking facility.

The most dramatic changes will be seen in the playing areas of the theatre stages. Gordon Pearlman, designer for the new "Wilderness Road" production, is using advantage of the natural beauty of the forest area and, therefore, has placed an emphasis on creating an atmosphere that is genuinely "out of doors". Concrete stages are being replaced by playing areas covered with dirt and grass. Real trees and stones add to the authenticity in design.

One of the most notable changes is the "mountain" which will occupy a large portion of the main stage. The "mountain" is a real dirt "mountain" complete with trees, grass, and rocks. The wall that formerly covered the back part of the center stage has been removed so that the audience can see into the wooded hills surrounding the theatre where some of the play's most dramatic moments occur in the chilling Civil War battles that resound through the forest.

Most of the renovation has been completed; yet, there remains a lot to do. Still everyone is optomistic about the final results of all the intricate planning and hard physical labor. The "new" Indian Fort Theatre will be ready for the upcoming summer production of "Wilderness Road" which opens June 29 and plays 8:30 nightly except Mondays through Sept. 4 in Berea.

'Lock-in' successfully curbs rising health costs

"Lock-in", a Kentucky Medical Assistance Program (KMAP) pilot project demonstrating how rapid local care costs can be reduced without negatively affecting the quality of service, is now in operation.

The project began last year in a 10-county area. Here's how it works. The KMAP, with the aid of physicians, identifies patients who receive more than the monthly average number of benefits under medical assistance. Then a social worker counsels the "over-utilizers," explaining that they are allowed to use the services of just one physician and one pharmacy. Office visits and prescriptions are limited to four per patient per month. If more services and drugs are needed, the physician must authorize them. Since July, a public health nurse has let "Lock-in" recipients know how and when to use medical services.

KMAP reports the counseling and educational teamwork efforts have helped prevent any misunderstanding and/or resistance to the project.

Before "Lock-in," the average cost of prescriptions and physician office visits for each overutilizer was $91,56 per month. Under "Lock-in," this amount was reduced in the first six months of 1971 to $46.51 and to $10.43 in the second six months. The average KMAP recipient's prescriptions and physican office visits cost $17.20 monthly."

Homemakers meet

The Carlisle West Homemakers Club met Friday, April 14 at the Carlisle Christian Church with 14 members present.

Mrs. W.G. Irvin, president, presided at the meeting. Reports were heard from the following chairwomen: Issues and Concerns, Landscape, Reading, and Family Life.

Mrs. Virginia S. Donovan gave the lesson on "Convenience Foods". She pointed out that a woman's day has become so busy--work outside the home, community responsibilities, hobbies, keeping the home up--she has less time than ever to spend on meals. Although the modern housewife isn't really looking for magic, she is looking for convenience.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Juanita Cummins and Miss Lucille Buntin.

Phenomenology conference to be held Friday

The Friday morning session of the Fifth Lexington Conference on Phenomenology" with the Central Theme, "Language and Linguistic Disturbance" will begin at 9:00 a.m. in the Lexington VA Hospital Auditorium. Dr. Kenneth B. Moore, associate chief of staff for research, will chair the session dedicated to the subject of "Aphasia". Dr. Norman Geschwind, professor, Neurology, Harvard University Medical School, Boston, Mass., will speak on "Clinical Experience and Interpretation" while Sheila Blumstein, Ph.D., Department of Linguistics, Brown University, Providence, R.I., will give a linguistic interpretation of aphasia.

Serving as discussant for both papers will be Don Rude, Ph.D., professor of Philosophy, New York State University, Stony Brook, Long Island, New York City.

Veterans Administration issues timetable for returning vets

With more Vietnam era servicemen returning to civilian life, the Veterans Administration points out again that certain deadlines are important to these young men and women.

Civilian return will be smoother, VA advised, if veterans keep in mind the following timetable after separation:

--In 10 days, report address to Selective Service through local board (in person or by mail).

--In 30 days, register with Selective Service or any local board, if not already registered.

--In 90 days, apply to former employer for re-employment.

--As soon as possible, register with local state employment service office. (Veterans have up to a year to apply for unemployment compensation, but applications filed after a long period of unemployment could result in a lower rate of unemployment compensation).

--In 120 days, or one year if totally disabled at time of separation, convert Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (without examination) to private, commercial policy.

--Within one year from date of notice of VA rating on disability, apply to any VA office for G.I. life insurance based on service connected disability.

--Within one year, apply to any VA office for dental care.

--As soon as possible, apply to any VA office for G.I. education or training, which must be completed within eight years of separation from military service.

VA notes there are no time limits for veterans to:

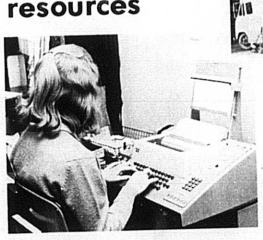
--Apply to any VA office for a G.I. loan guaranty to buy a farm or buy, build or improve a home.

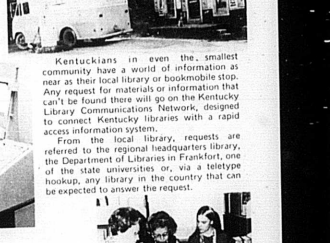
--File claims with any VA office for compensation for service connected disabilities or disease, or apply for hospital care.

--Seek assistance from local offices of state employment service in finding employment or entering Labor Department job training programs.

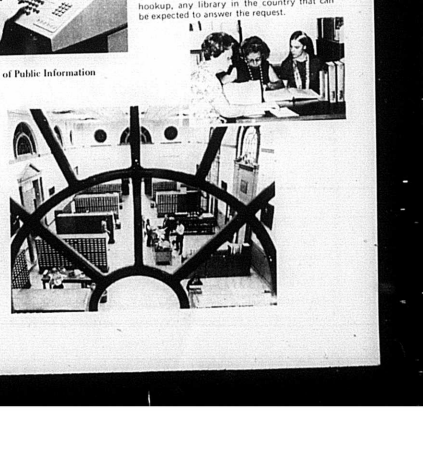
VA added that its 72 veterans assistance centers around the country are ready to help veterans get a quick start in civilian life.

Network links library resources





Photos by Ky. Dept. of Public Information

Kentuckians in even the smallest community have a world of information as near as their local library or bookmobile stop. Any request for materials or information that can't be found there will go on the Kentucky Library Communications Network, designed to connect Kentucky libraries with a rapid access information system.


From the local library, requests are referred to the regional headquarters library, the Department of Libraries in Frankfort, one of the state universities or, via a teletype hookup, any library in the country that can be expected to answer the request.
