A Carlisle man was wounded with a .22 caliber pistol bullet in his left upper chest sometime during the night of Friday, April 21, authorities surmising the wound was self-inflicted but whether the shot was intentional or accidental was not known.

According to a report by Paris Paramedics George E. Henson and Charles Jordan, they received a call from the Fourth County Hospital at 2:48 a.m. Saturday reporting the man had been shot.

The report stated that the man, Russell D. Hunt, 249 East Main Street, Carlisle, was brought to the hospital by Jimmy Henderson, son of Carlisle, Henderson told officers the man's son, Charlie Hunt, also of Carlisle, had asked him to take the elder Hunt home.

Henderson said he knew Hunt suffered from a heart condition and when he went to the car and asked by Hunt to be taken to the hospital, he thought Hunt had suffered a heart attack.

According to the report, it was only after Henderson had gotten to the hospital that he noticed the blood on the man's clothing and discovered the wound.

No one heard a shot, but a .22-caliber pistol with one bullet having been fired was found in the man's car.

Hunt was transferred to the University of Kentucky Medical Center by ambulance. The bullet reentered the man's chest, but was said to have struck his lungs.

The shooting apparently occurred where Hunt's car was parked.

"Plain English"

Grail had the idea and Fred had the money. Over a mid-eight cup of coffee, they agreed to start manufacturing a new kind of coffee. As for profits, they agreed on what they assumed would be a simple formula: "fifty-fifty" split.

Things went well. Nevertheless, for personal reasons, they decided after a year to bring the venture to an end.

Dividing the profits should have been merely a matter of arithmetic. But Grail insisted he was entitled to an extra share as wages on the ground that he alone had put in regular work hours at the company office.

Fred finally won the argument—but only after a costly trip to court. Two years of bitter litigation was the price the partners had to pay for failing to make clear, right at the start, what they meant by the expression "fifty-fifty."

The case illustrates the danger of assuming that "plain English" is always plain. When money or legal rights are at stake, people have an enormous capacity for putting different interpretations persons remain relatively large. The explanation, in part, is that marriages are taking place at a later age than they did in the 1960s.

Currently, the median age at first marriage is given as 23.2 years for men and 20.8 for women.
