Carlisle native is honored

L. Ray Smart, the son of Mrs. Minerva Sugg, Walnut Street, Carlisle, was named "Outstanding Citizen of Greenway Downs" by the civic association at its second annual Outstanding Citizen Appreciation Award night. Mr. and Mrs. Smart live at 1022 Hillwood Avenue, Falls Church, Va., in the Greenway Downs residential area. They have a married daughter, Jan Logan O'Kelley.

During two terms as president of the civic association and 19 years on the executive board, Smart helped the area move from a rural outpost to part of the urban metropolitan area of Washington, D.C.

During his first term in 1950, Smart and his administration persuaded area residents to help pay for street lights, for regular trash removal, and a central sewage system. Smart also wrote the community newsletter and arranged for a column which appeared in the late 1950s in a local weekly newspaper.

In addition to his active involvement in his community, Smart was president of Madison Elementary School PTA and vice president of George Mason-Senior High PTA. He also has served as vice president of the Falls Church Garden Club.

An active member of the Kentucky Society of Washington, Smart has served as its president and also has been the president of the Conference of State Societies, which includes the presidents of all the societies representing all our states. He, his wife, and daughter are Kentucky Colonials.

Smart works in Washington for the Department of the Interior.

Panel exempts mail rates of controls

The Cost of Living Council has exempted the U.S. Postal Service from price controls. At the same time the council approved a previously filed Postal Service request that it be allowed to raise third-class mail rates by 25 1/2 per cent. The new rates are scheduled to go into effect Jan. 24. The increase is expected to provide $13 million a year additional revenue.

A spokesman for the council said that the wages of postal workers will continue to be subject to the authority of the Pay Board.

However the rates set by the Postal Service, which last year became an independent corporation within the executive branch of government need not be reviewed by the Price Commission.

Instead, the council has asked the Postal Rate Commission, an independent regulatory agency that now reviews requests for postal rate increases, to make sure that future rate increases conform to the council's anti-inflationary standards.

The cost of Living Council, as the umbrella organization for Phase 2 of the administration's economic stabilization program, determines who is covered and who is exempted from wage and price controls.

Last month, the executive director of the council, Donald Runsfeld, said at a news conference that the Postal Service

City's yearly audit to cost $600

The City's yearly audit will be done by Sugg and Nolan for $600. It was decided Monday night at the adjourned meeting of City Council.

Since the firm has been working during the year on the books, it is in a better position to accomplish the audit cheaper than a new firm, it was decided.

City attorney Jack Conley reported that elected officials should not be paying social security on their City salaries. A social security representative will go over the City books in February and repay the City for the amount which has been withheld on the Police Chief and on Councilmen. City employees, including firemen, must remain under social security unless all employees are taken off the rolls. Council had requested that Conley research the question of being able to pay the Fire Chief a total amount, and let him pay each fireman. After Conley's report, it was decided to continue paying each fireman separately.

The purchase of gasoline for the next year was tabled until the Feb. meeting. The City will continue to buy from the present bidder until then.

Three ordinances were read by the City Attorney. Council voted to waive the second reading because of the emergency situation and to adopt the ordinances. They are published elsewhere in this issue of the Mercury.

In other motions, Council voted to sell the old cars on the City Barn lot, park the City pickup in the barn at night, and move the building (which used to be the police station) closer to the barn for an office.

It also decided to replace the fire plug on Walnut and Water Streets and to move two hydrants behind the curb on West Main if permission can be obtained from property owners.

Councilman Clifton Waugh mentioned that something should be done about the broken bottom and cans on the fourth yard and on the City Streets. He also said that some citizens had complained about there being five policemen on duty on last Saturday night. Chief Allen Earlywine stated that the extra policemen were not being paid—they were working for the experience only.

It was discovered recently that there had never been a sewer hook-up to the Fireman's Building on the corner of Main and Locust. The contractor who did the original work left a shortage of a foot of pipe. Council agreed to pay to correct this error.

Since Charles Fay is now a Councilman, a new Fireman is needed. The subject was tabled until the Feb. meeting of Council.

The unofficial 1971 Financial Report of the City may be found on page three. The figures will not be official until the yearly audit is completed.

Two corrections made in School board minutes; Recreation plan undecided

Two corrections to the minutes of the Dec. 18 meeting of the Nicholas County Board of Education were made Saturday night, as representatives of the Ministerial association, the City Council, Jaycees and Recreation council awaited their turn to speak.

The corrections concerned the vote of one member Billy Hunter, who as reported to this newspaper on Sunday, Dec. 19 had voted against a proposed cost-of-living increase for Superintendent D. P. Parley. A representative of The Mercury, after much discussion with the superintendent was allowed to read the minutes on the morning of Dec. 21. The minutes at that time proclaimed that all members of the board had voted unanimously for the increase. The other correction was brought up by William T. Dampier who stated that the proposal in question was not yet had been discussed on Dec. 18, and that minute number 90 should show that the cost-of-living increase should be any figure above $1200 if approved by the Wage-Price board.

A check with the Internal Revenue Service in Lexington revealed that if a prior contract existed before the Aug. 15, 1971 freeze, that more than likely the increase would be approved.

Three sets of minutes were approved unanimously following the two corrections to minute number 90. Since it is not the policy of the present board to read the minutes of previous meetings, should someone desire to know their content, they will have to go to the superintendent's office and request same.

The Rev. Neil Thompson, representing the Ministerial association spoke briefly asking permission for his organization to set up a counseling service to students at the high school. The service would be staffed by a different minister each week and at the beginning would be held one day per week for one or two hours. The request was given unanimous approval.

Clifton Waugh, a councilman, and interested citizen in local recreation appealed to the board to give all local consideration possible to the need of the community for a recreation area comprising the old munity for a recreation area comprising the old Following Mr. Waugh's plea, Mayor Hill Power pointed out that the area was zoned as residential which might mean a decrease to the board's sale of the property.

A question from the floor as to how many bids had been received brought a negative reply, but Sept. Parley stated that he had had inquiries concerning the property, Howard Livingston, board chairman, mentioned the headquarters school property, and R. S. Willis informed the board of inquiries about the Morefield property.

Joseph H. Conley representing the Carlisle-Nicholas County Jaycees noted that the organization was on record favoring the giving of the building to the Recreational council. Attorney Conley also noted there was statutory authority for such a move on the board's part.

Bob Sparks, local dentist, and head of the Recreation council gave a progress report on work of the council to date, and also indicated his organization would submit a bid for the school building and gym.

The treasurer's report was read by Mrs. William
