San Lorenzo where the Chagres River and the Caribbean Sea merge to flow into the Atlantic Ocean; the Miraflores and Pedro Miguel Locks, points where ships from all over the world transit the Canal; the town of Balboa, and the military bases of the Canal Zone; Panama military bases of the Canal Zone, and the military bases of the Canal Zone. Panama is the only spot in the world where one can go to the day on the Pacific side of the Isthmus of Panama, and in a short while a distance of about 50 miles also see the Atlantic Ocean.

In Panama City they enjoyed shopping in the many import, craft and kiosk shops, as well as at the market places.

At a moment of their trip, their daughter presented them with a Cuna Indian mola handmade by the Cuna Indians, who inhabit the San Blas Islands which stretch down the Atlantic coast of Panama to Colombia, South America. The colorful and elaborately designed mola is fashioned by sewing several different pieces of cloth one upon the other using the reverse applique technique. In addition to being used as a wall decoration, the mola is also made into other attractive items.

Phone company seeks rate increase

South Central Bell today asked the Kentucky Public Service Commission to authorize revised rate schedules which would provide for a 4.4 percent rate increase to continue providing good telephone service in Kentucky. In its petition, the company asked the Commission for rate adjustments that would provide an additional $12.6 million annually after taxes ($5.3 million before taxes).

In June of 1970, the telephone company asked the Commission to approve a general rate increase of $14.8 million. In a split decision, the Commission denied that request, and the case is now pending before the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Paul D. McCandless, vice president and general manager for South Central's Kentucky operations, stated that additional revenue must be obtained if the company is to continue meeting the telephone needs of Kentucky. Commenting on the pending court case, McCandless said: "Revenue requirements in that case were based on costs during a test period which began in early 1969 and is now outdated. Moreover, nearly two years of actual operating results subsequent to the test period have confirmed the company's position on all major issues in that case. The theories of the opposition witnesses which Commission majority relied on have not been proven wrong by actual operating results since the record in the case closed. As a consequence, the company has suffered a loss of millions of dollars of revenue which cannot be retrieved."

"Without rate relief, our financial position has deteriorated from the already serious situation that we faced a year and a half ago, and we will be able to refer to today's request for revised rates," McCandless stated. "Since 1957, when we had our last annual general rate increase, there have been changes in some of the rates for our service—some went up, some went down and some did not change at all. The net result of all these changes is that the overall price of telephone service in Kentucky (local and all long distance) is actually 59 percent lower today than it was nearly 15 years ago.

"While overall telephone rates in Kentucky have decreased since 1957, the cost of living has gone up 44 percent," he said. "And, even with the requested increases, our overall rates will be up less than 1 percent during this same period."

"Our record of price performance is one which few, if any, businesses in a Kentucky can match," he continued. "Thus we have reached the time when it is no longer possible, without a re-prioritizing of telephone service, to provide the high quality of service our customers desire, absorb the impact of past inflation on our operations, and achieve an earnings level which will cause people to invest in our business and supply the additional money which is required for new construction to satisfy our customers' demands for telephone service."

McCandless pointed out that a regulated utility is subject to the same economic facts of life that every business faces. "It is simply unrealistic to expect that a business, just because it is regulated, can provide service in keeping with 1972 standards at prices below those established in 1957—and that is the fix we are in."

"This brings us to a crossroads with respect to telephone service in Kentucky," McCandless said. "We have fought inflation for years, as evidenced by the fact that we have held the line on overall telephone prices for nearly 15 years, but holding the price line for so long has caused such a serious deterioration in our financial condition that we cannot continue to raise new capital in the amount required. Consequently, we will no longer be able to provide the quantity and quality of telephone service desired by our customers without matching current costs with current prices."

"We are confident that, after the Public Service Commission has had an opportunity to see that actual operating results (since our 1970 case was filed) have discredited the financial theories of the witnesses that the Commission's split decision relied on, the Commission will recognize the needs of Kentucky telephone users and grant the rate relief requested."

"We support the objectives of the President's Price Commission to fight inflation, and will comply fully with the Commission's guidelines for public utilities in implementing authorized rate increases."
