Permits required to construct entrances to state road system

Many citizens are not aware that the Kentucky Revised Statutes require a permit for construction of private entrances to state highways. The Department of Highways' right of way.

In order to protect the safety of the traveling public on state roads, we have to see to it that entrances are properly drained and do not produce a hazard for the traveling public. The Division of Maintenance of the Department of Highways.

The Revised Statutes refer not only to driveways, but also to buildings, fences, trees, ditches, embankments, signs, utility lines, and mailbox turnouts. This is a limited list of encroachments. It is safe to say, anything affecting state right of way must be covered by a permit.

Applications for permits can be obtained at no cost from the Department's district offices. After a permit is obtained, the applicant is required to furnish any necessary materials as specified by the Department. It is the Department's policy to treat private entrances, except where the cost would be considered excessive, as a public utility. The applicant's responsibility to both furnish the materials and do the required work.

Insecticide residues hurt have learned from ASCS source that several major buyers both for domestic use and for export, have indicated concern about the level of DDT and TDE residue in their purchases from certain Kentucky areas. Some have indicated that they may reduce their purchases in those areas this year.

Gregory said the levels of insecticide residue in tobacco is fast becoming one of the most important measures of quality. He said this trend began in 1969 when the U.S. Department of Agriculture banned the use of DDT on tobacco. In March of 1970 the same ban was imposed for TDE. A few days later Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, under direction from the USDA, notified its state and county offices that "beginning with the 1970 crop, no price support will be made available on any kind of tobacco treated with DDT or TDE or a mixture containing such pesticides."

The University of Kentucky Department of Entomology had removed both DDT or TDE from its recommended list before the federal ban and replaced them with other insecticides of demonstrated effectiveness. We feel a responsibility in increasing grower awareness concerning accepted insecticide practices. In order to preserve both his personal rights and livelihood and Kentucky's tobacco industry," said Gregory.

"In order to serve this end the Department of Entomology recommendations for Tobacco Fields" (Misc. 270-B). Copies of this publication are available from county Extension offices or from the Department of Entomology.

Gregory said the Department of Entomology's concept of insect management involves the use of insecticides only when insect problems are reducing the quantity and quality of the crop. To use insecticides in a preventative spray schedule is not only a waste of money but also creates further residue problems, he said.

"We can advise what registered insecticide to use for the management of specific insect pests, and also point out the risks involved in using such non-registered foliar sprays as aldrin, chlordan, DDT, dieldrin, endrin, lead arsenate, Paris green, TDE (DDD, Rhothaine), and toxaphene," Gregory said.

"The presence of non-registered pesticides as well as high residue levels of registered insecticides is regarded as a negative buying characteristic," concluded the UK scientist. "The risks involve personal loss to the grower and placing the quality of Kentucky tobacco in question. This cannot be allowed to happen. We must live within the framework of the law to insure a future for our quality tobacco industry."

Ford undergoes heart surgery

Gov. Wendell Ford recently underwent successful heart surgery at Methodist Hospital in Houston, Texas.

Dr. Michael DeBakey, heart specialist, said Ford's health as excellent after the one-hour operation, during which a three-inch section of his abdominal aorta was removed and replaced by a Dacron tube. The aorta is the main artery pumping blood from the heart to branch arteries.

The abnormality, diagnosed by DeBakey as an aneurism or enlargement at a point in the artery, was discovered at a Lexington hospital following a back injury the Governor sustained in Owensboro.

DeBakey said no blood transfusions were required during the operation and that a bypass of the heart was not necessary. He said only glucose was administered.

The removed heart surgeon described the surgery as "standard curative procedure" for the condition, a weakening of the arterial wall that could have ruptured had X-rays during back treatment not spotted the abnormality.
