

Outdoor Lore

Lightning bugs, those pyro-technics will soon enhance the soft warm darkness of summer evenings, have been the source of wonder for centuries. For more than 2,300 years since Aristotle, the Macedonian philosopher and nature writer, commented that "though they are not in their nature fire... they seem to produce light"... these insects and other creatures that glow in the dark have been under study. But only in recent years has been discovered how this "cold light" is produced.

And old logs that burned with fire, yet were never consumed, by many occasions superstitious persons, unaware that this ghost light came from bacteria or fungi growing within the rotten wood, were scared out of their wits by it. In this respect, an incident comes to mind involving a young rustic returning home one late Sunday night from a date who has got found. It was a warm, drizzly night and, half asleep, the young man was passing a country graveyard hardly the road.

As he walked and ascended from a tall oak tree shading the road and, looking up, the young man saw his tracks at the terrifying sight of glowing, ghostly form by the cemetery gate just ready to "pounce" upon him.

What must have been an instinctive reflex action carried out without thought, he yanked his foot back and, startled, blasted off a half-dozen plant blank rounds. Then finding that to his surprise, that his feet would move, he took off for home, calling out, "I should know looking back more than twice."

SCOTCH FIDDLIN'-Fitzhugh Craft, Civil Defense director in Cumberland, Ky., frequently visits the Civil Defense office in the State Capitol at Frankfort and is being interviewed. There is a standing request that he bring his "singing saws." Craft, who calls his art "Scotch fiddling," entertains the office with a variety of songs from "Look What They've Done to My Song, Ma," to "How Great Thou Art" (Karen Tomo's song).

And if he trips get in the rows, can also present some problems. It is the month when the optimum and energy so much in evils during April and May begins to wane; when insects and plant sprays up, and the weather is temper and control measures; when storms flattened unsharpened and lawn mowers may be used with webworms.

Still gardening must go on and to counteract some of the evils of the insect and plant sprays, they cannot be controlled with these suggestions. Use frequently, controls thrips.

Everyone likes lobsters, but who can afford them?

Washington—One reason lobster is so expensive is that even lobsters appreciate the taste of fresh lobster. The crustaceans' penchant for cannibalism hinders efforts to raise them commercially at a time when declining lobster catches are causing prices to soar. Some seafood restaurants have begun removing lobster dishes from their menus rather than pay $12 or more a pound for the meat, it's a far cry from earlier days, when American colonists found lobsters so abundant they plowed them out to fertilize wheat and corn fields, the National Geographic Society says.

As lobsters become scarce, fishermen are forced to go farther offshore. Lowering 6-foot metal poles 400 feet into the sea at the edge of the continental shelf, they sometimes bring up 25-pounders that have lived on the ocean floor for about 100 years. Few lobsters reach such an advanced age and size. While a few large soft-shell become food for fish and for each other, a few are used and equipped with oyster knives for crushing and cutting. A five- or seven-year-old lobster can defeat most of its foes, but periodically it sheds its shell as it grows, and it caught before a new one forms it is an easy meal for any passing fish- or lobster.

"Keep long enough together, a group of 100 lobsters would eventually become one large lobster," says Dr. Clarence P. Idyll, a marine biologist, Scientific Committee to seek a safe, economical way to raise the combative crustaceans in large quantities.

What to do in June. June is a glorious month. With "perfect days" of springing corn, wedding bells, and no end of gorgeous music, it is—from a poetic standpoint—one of the best months of the year. But also for the gardener, June can also present some problems. It is the month when the optimum and energy so much in evils during April and May begins to wane; when insects and plant sprays up, and the weather is temper and control measures; when storms flattened unsharpened and lawn mowers may be used with webworms.

Head Start teachers meet June 8 and 9

Four counties participated in a Health Start and Appalachian Culture Curriculum program Thursday and Friday at Nicholas County Elementary School. Head Start teachers from Fleming, Bath and Boone counties (LVCAP) and Parts, and instructors attended the two-day workshop. The two-day instruction was given in activities geared to help preschool children develop positive self-image by using language, art, music, drama, books, balls, and music, under the Health Start program. Friday, Appalachian Culture crafts tables were set up with instructors, Crafts and Instructors were: Pottery, Mrs. Susan Taylor, Resource teacher, Floyd county; Corn Husk Dolls, Mrs. Lida Talbert, Head Start teacher, Monroe county; Apple Dolls, Mrs. Ines Wilson, Head Start teacher, Montgomery county; Basket weaving, Mrs. Margaret Hunter, Carlisle; Sewing, Mrs. Lena Smith, Edna, Madison county; Marvin Child, Montgomery County Elementary School; Writing, Carolyn Patrick, Montgomery County; Reading, Mrs. Martha Whitling, Child Development Training Specialist, Franklin Fork School, Harwood Rice, Carlisle; Quilting, Mrs. Edna Moore, Harwood Rice Valley Crafts Program. These crafts were brought to a child's capability level, so he can achieve the craft. The two-day program was under the direction of Miss Pat Stapleton, Leadership Development Program, University of North Carolina-Greensboro, N.C.; Mrs. Claudia Taylor, LVCAP Head Start Development Coordinator, Maypsville and Mrs. Ezzar Talbert, LVCAP Head Start Director, Carlisle.

Watkins graduates

Charles K. Watkins, Circuit Clerk of Orangeburg, Kentucky, Group Bankers' Association, is among the 1,167 bankers attending the 23rd annual two-week session of the National Bankers' Association, being held at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and continued through June 10. Classes started May 29 in plant food for next year's flowers. Also if you want to try something new, try a new summer phlox. This will cause the phlox to bloom earlier, in all shades, and increased bud size. Mrs. Watkins, 289-5466. 6-3-72.
