Tax deduction average $1570

Taxpayers in Nicholas County who are working on their Federal income tax returns can now determine how closely their personal deductions compare with the average.

Were their charitable contributions in the past year larger or smaller than those made by others? What about their deductible outlays for medical expenses, for interest and for local taxes?

To know whether their deductions are running higher or lower than those listed by other people might be useful.

Some light in this direction is provided by the Commerce Clearing House, a national authority on tax and business law, and by the Internal Revenue Service. They have released data showing what the deductions have amounted to in recent years at each income level.

Among families in the United States with incomes close to and average prevailing in Nicholas County, the deductions come to approximately $1,570, which is about 21 percent of their adjusted gross income.

The percentage varies with income. It is found, it ranges from 15 percent to 23 percent.

Families in the local area whose incomes are as high as $20,000 to $25,000, for example, would have deductions of about $3,500 under normal circumstances, equal to about 15 percent of their adjusted gross income. On the other hand, those in the $7,000 to $8,000 bracket would be deducting $1,500 in deductions.

As for the donations to charity, it is noted that the government is a silent partner in those gifts. It picks up part of the tab. As a result, the net cost of the taxpayer of each dollar he contributes, is 81 cents for those with small incomes.

A fisherman writes one said: "I've in the the mucus; we all have to go through it. But for those living in the 1970's, this statement is only partially true. With the development of a vaccine, we no longer have to "go through" German measles.

Also known as rubella, German measles was considered to be an unimportant childhood disease until 1941, when an Australian eye doctor noted contacts in many infants whose mothers had the so-called "rubella syndrome" were found to have heart defects and mental retardation.

A virus infection, rubella is spread by droplets expelled from the nose and throat. Its symptoms—slight fever, swelling of the lymph glands and average prevailing in Nicholas County, the deductions come to approximately $1,570, which is about 21 percent of their adjusted gross income.

A woman contracts rubella during the first 3 months of pregnancy possibly just before conception—there is a 15 to 20 percent chance that her infant will have one or more serious malformations. The virus, passing through the placenta, apparently reaches the fetus by attacking developing tissues and cells.

Infants born to women who are infected, depending on the stage of development at the time of infection, may have one of several defects.

The virus was first isolated in 1961 five years later, scientists at the University of Biologic Standards (DBS) developed a live, attenuated (weakened) rubella vaccine. In cooperation with the National Institute of Health and the American Diarrhoea and Intestinal Diseases launched an extensive vaccine evaluation program in many parts of the nation.

After thousands of tests, proved the vaccine to be both safe and effective, the Federal government issued the first license

Measure easing Sunday closing law signed

Gov. Wendell Ford, Friday signed into law the bill easing Kentucky's 171-year-old Sunday closing law.

Ford signed the measure, Senate Bill 68, without announcing it. The official legislative record Monday said the bill had been signed.

The new law, which will become effective in June, will allow grocery and drug stores and gift and hat shops to remain open on Sundays across the state.

The governing bodies of cities and counties then can allow any other type store or activity to operate on Sunday within their jurisdictions that they wish, by local ordinance.

A similar bill easing the Sunday closing law was passed by both chambers of the General Assembly in 1971 but it was vetoed by then-Gov. Louie B. Nunn.

stations programs throughout the nation. The CDC reported recently that more than 12 million doses of vaccine have been distributed so far. It is estimated that about half of the rubella vaccine target population—children aged 1 to 12—have been immunized.

The vaccine is not given routinely to a woman of child-bearing age. However, if blood tests show she is not immune (and if she is not pregnant) she may be given the vaccine if she agrees to allow pregnancy for two months.

Since a rubella vaccine has been available, the Public Health Service's Center for Disease Control (CDC) has provided funds, vaccine, administrative assistance and consultation in state and local health departments carrying out immunization programs.
