Total Homemaking Program

By SharonCrawford

The overall purpose of vocational Home Economics is to help prepare individuals for the responsibilities and activities involved in everyday life.

The total homemaking program of vocational Home Economics consists of six different areas. The first of these is class instruction. Up to date equipment and teaching materials are made available in these six divisions, Child Care and Development, Clothing, Family Relations, Foods and Nutrition, Housing, and Management.

Home Visitation, is the second area of the total program. Home Economics teachers make visits to the homes of their pupils in order to become better acquainted with home situations and the needs of pupils and to help them make use of class instruction in their homes.

The third area is Home Experience. This is when the pupils put to use what they have learned in their class instruction, and helps them to make progress in F,H,A.

The fourth area is School and Community Experiences. These experiences offer many educational activities for pupils that contribute to the goals of a homemaking education program. The other clubs that a pupil belongs to, and the community activities in which they participate, are also included here.

Future Homemakers of America or F,H,A, as it is more commonly called, is the fifth area. This is a National organization of girls and boys studying homemaking in high school. Membership in F,H,A, is voluntary, but a student must have completed one year of Home Economics or be taking it.

The last area of the total program is Adult or Young Adult Education. Vocational home economics has instruction for adults who are out of school, and wish to improve their homemaking practices. The youth program gives help to out of school youth on homemaking problems.

As you can see, the total homemaking program is designed to give help to all age groups in either developing or improving their homemaking skills.

What to do in March

by Nevyl Shackelford
UK College of Agriculture

When the first warm days of March appear, a great temptation besets winter-weary gardeners to get the jump on the season and start planting, removing mulches, and doing many other things that could be undone by the fickle weather of spring. With respect to this, there is an old rule which holds that in March, when tempted to start gardening first take a trip to Florida and then begin when you get back.

Unfortunately for most home gardeners, a Florida trip at this time will be impractical, if not impossible. So what are they to do, and what can they do to profitably pass off the time? Some answers come from the horticultural staff of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

In March a restless gardener can repair, clean, and order new parts for sprayers, rototillers, and other pieces of lawn and garden equipment.

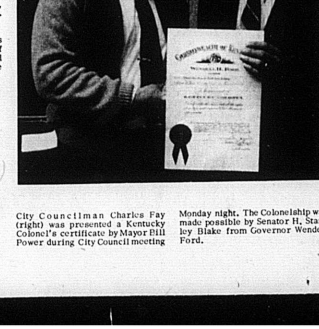
He can also prune peach and apple trees and grape vines, but not too much. He can apply commercial dormant oil sprays to control scale insects on his fruit trees; loosen wire labels on new plants to prevent girdling; make soil tests; start annual flowers from seed indoors like begonias, impatiens, verbena, and bincas; plant bare-rooted roses; clean gladiolus; and divide dahlias and cannas for readiness for mid-April planting.

Near the end of the month, the gardener can take the mulch off perennials, seed bluegrass lawns (two pounds of Ken-Blue variety per 1000 square feet); and for lawns not fertilized last fall, apply 10 pounds of 20-10-10 per 1,000 square feet or 20 pounds of 10-10-10 for the same amount of ground.

Overgrown spring-flowering shrubs also can be pruned in March. March pruning may reduce the volume of blooming but this sacrifice of flowers will be offset by a more attractive-formed shrub. In March before the leaves are out, the gardener can get a better view of the branches. In this pruning, it is recommended that growth should be removed from the bottom of the shrub, rather than from the top.

According to old tradition, potatoes can be planted during the "dark nights of March". Then, of course, there are some varieties of peas, lettuce, beets, and other cool weather crops that can be "put in the ground" during this month.

All in all, March is the month in which, as old time gardeners used to say, "hurry, but take your time". It is the month in which to get ready for April; to talk things over with your county Extension agent; to use restraint; and to suit your work to the weather.



City Councilman Charles Fay (right) was presented a Kentucky Colonel's certificate by Mayor Bill Power during City Council meeting Monday night. The Colonelship was made possible by Senator H. Stanley Blake from Governor Wendell Ford.
