Outdoor Lore

Full fall, for the first time in many, many years, I re-experienced the old-fashioned joys of chestnut hunting... There was, however, a difference. The chestnuts were not the same...

These imported chestnuts, though, are far better than none and any landowner will profit by setting out a few trees on his property... They attract wildlife and provide some fairly good eating when gathered fresh and roasted or boiled.

For years bagpats and others have entertained the hope that the native American chestnut would eventually develop an immunity to the blight and that future generations would again be the wonderful tree flourishing on the hills.

And now there seems to be some grounds for this hope. Each autumn for the past few years more and more chestnuts have been seen...

Two of the major officers of the president, a former Department of Transportation lawyer named Eugene Garfield, is 38. Mr. Garfield, who reportedly later to fly, got the idea for his Auto-Train from a possible need for such a service in the United States.

Auto-Train services are well established in Europe, the best known transporting passengers and their cars from Paris to the French Riviera.

New train for motorists may expand its service

If you want to drive to Florida for Christmas, it's already too late to take the train—the Auto-Train.

The young entrepreneurs of America's latest travel venture—the railroad passenger service for motorists who want to take their cars with them—say they are not looking for a clear track ahead for the project.

They claim that the Auto-Train to Florida from near Washington is sold out through the first of the year, that business is so good they'll soon be starting two daily trains each way...

Auto-Train is the first common carrier passenger railroad to be started in the United States in at least 50 years...

Passengers driving up to the railroad's newly built terminal at the Washington suburb of Lorton, Va., or to the southern terminal at Saadee in central Florida, find waiting for them a new white train with red and purple stripes.

Their cars are driven aboard double-deck, enclosed auto carriers, and they are directed to seats in observation coaches or bedroom compartments.

On the 15-hour trip north or south, passengers are offered buffets, midnight snacks, breakfasts, movies, piano or guitar playing, and sometimes special live group singing in the cocktail lounges.
