
Doubling up

Because of a shortage of cruisers, the Kentucky State Police are having to do some "doubling up". Either two troopers ride in the same car or one vehicle is driven two shifts by separate officers. To assure highway safety, Gov. Wendell Ford's administration is taking steps to alleviate the shortage.

State to correct cruiser shortage

FRANKFORT—In a continuing effort to assure highway safety, Gov. Wendell Ford's administration is taking steps to come to grips with a problem which has been "snowballing" since fiscal 1971.

Due to an administrative decision made two years ago, the Kentucky State Police now does not have enough patrol cars for all of its officers.

In fiscal 1971, the state Department of Finance permitted Public Safety officials to buy only 100 new police cars, although money originally had been budgeted for the purchase of 240 cars.

Finance's decision was reported to be part of an national effort by states to force auto firms to again grant a "fleet discount" to car dealers who sell to cities and states. When the discount was removed, the average price of a police cruiser increased by about 30 percent or $295.

With such an increase in price, officials could purchase only about 160 new cars, but Finance's action decreased the number of vehicles to be bought by another 60.

Although a small deficit in cruisers has always existed, officials admit that once a substantial shortage does occur, it is extremely difficult to catch up. Currently, about 60 cars, the same number of vehicles not purchased because of Finance's 1971 decision, are needed by state troopers. The shortage is expected to become more critical in February when 40 cadets graduate from the State Police Academy.

Reflecting Governor Ford's concern for highway safety, efforts are being made to correct the situation. So far in fiscal 1973, 176 cars have been bought, and plans call for the purchase of 137 more. This amounts to over a 200 percent increase in cruisers purchased as compared with fiscal 1971.

However, state police officials say most new vehicles are being used to replace cars with high mileage.

"We like to replace approximately half of our 650 car fleet every year," said Col. Larry G. Boucher, director of the state police.

"After about two years of operation, a car will compile 50,000-60,000 miles. If the vehicle is driven much more, maintenance costs increase considerably, and we do not get a good auction price for the car when we sell it," explained Boucher.

When a lack of vehicles exists, either a car is used for two shifts, which quickly adds mileage and wear and tear to the vehicle, or two troopers ride in the same car, causing a waste in manpower.

Federal money for the purchase of vehicles apparently is not available to Public Safety at this time, and officials see no immediate solution to the problem without an increase in state funds.

Expect snow in December

Whether talk of snow reminds you of sledding or skidding, there's not much cause for concern here in Kentucky until December.

The average time of the first snowfall totalling one inch or more over a 24 hour period is mid-December of the eastern half of Kentucky and late December for the rest of the state. This information, based on snowfall records kept for more than 50 years, comes from A.R. Elam Jr., climatologist for Kentucky at the National Weather Service Office, University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The exception to this is southeast Kentucky, where one inch snows come earlier at higher elevations. In the Cumberland-Benham area (elevation about 1,500 feet), the average date is Nov. 26.

Of course, you may see some snow before then—these dates are just averages, Elam points out. In fact, snow flurries have already been spotted in parts of central and northeastern Kentucky, although no one inch depths were reported (Lexington had the earliest measurable snowfall on record in the early morning hours of Oct. 19, 1972.) And last year, most sections of the state had snow on Nov. 23-24, with total accumulations ranging from just a trace to as much as five inches.

However, the odds are against snow on the ground in November in most areas of Kentucky, he continues. For example, in Lexington, there's a 30 percent chance of a one inch snow before Dec. 2, a 50 percent chance before Dec. 15, and a 90 percent chance before Jan. 19. In other words, the first one inch, 24 hour snowfall at Lexington will occur—on the average—once in three years before Dec. 2 and in nine out of 10 years before Jan. 19, with Dec. 15 the average date for such a snow.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Repairman vs. Homeowner

Homeowners with grievances against repairmen are no novelty. But repairmen too have their grievances. If a plumber or a roofer or an electrician suffers an injury while working on your premises, you may well be held responsible in court.

In the lexicon of the law, a repairman is classified as a "business visitor". This means you owe a high degree of care for his safety. If he trips on a broken step or slips on a greasy floor, the fault—and the cost—is usually yours.

Take this case:

An absent-minded homeowner, barking his car out of the garage, knocked the ladder out from under a painter working on his shingles. When the painter filed suit for damages, the court ordered the homeowner to pay up. This was no way, said the court, to treat a business visitor.

It is also true, of course, that the repairman himself has duties with regard to his safety. In particular, he should be alert to the kinds of dangers that are common in his line of work.

A plasterer hired to patch a kitchen ceiling, had just gotten started when a chunk of plaster came crashing down on his head. He too tried to collect from the homeowner. But the court said this was the kind of danger a plasterer is supposed to foresee and avoid.

A similar ruling denied damages to a tree surgeon, injured when a dead limb collapsed beneath his weight.

A repairman may also be held to have "assumed the risk" of an accident if he uses your premises in an unauthorized manner. For example:

A painter, refinishing a house, hung his scaffolding from a gutter—without checking with the owner. While he was at work, the gutter suddenly pulled away from the wall, causing him to plunge to the ground.

But when the painter filed suit for damages, the court decided he had no claim. The judge said that by choosing such an unorthodox means of suspension, he had also chosen the risks that went with it.

Kentucky afield

By Hope Carleton

FRANKFORT—Kentucky hunters, as a group, are well known for their marksmanship abilities. As individuals they are apparently not only "sharp shooters" but relatively "safe" hunters, too, since Fish and Wildlife Resources records show only 11 fatalities attributable to hunting during the 1971 season.

And there were some 275,000 licensed hunters afield in Kentucky last year.

But although 11 fatal accidents seems low when compared to the total number of hunters, there is no such thing as an acceptable fatal accident record unless it is zero.

There are a number of ways by which gun safety experts feel the likelihood of accidents can be reduced and at the top of the list is plain old common sense.

Firearms, like all mechanical devices, should be kept in top condition so there will be no trouble with the weapon itself. The attitude of the hunter is a prime consideration, too, and gun safety must be uppermost in his mind.

Then there are the 10 Commandments of Gun Safety which, if followed by every hunter, would go a long way toward eliminating accidents.

The Commandments are:

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun.

2. Guns carried into camp or home, or when otherwise not in use, must always be unloaded, and taken down or have actions open; guns always should be carried in cases to shooting area.

3. Always be sure barrel and action are clear of obstructions, and that you have only ammunition of the proper size for the gun you are carrying. Remove oil and grease from chamber before firing.

4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble; keep the safety on until you are ready to shoot.

5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger; know the identifying features of the game you intend to hunt.

6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot; avoid all horseplay while handling a gun.

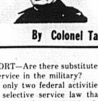
7. Unattended guns should be unloaded; guns and ammunition should be stored separately beyond reach of children and careless adults.

8. Never climb a tree or fence or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.

9. Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water; when at target practice, be sure your backstop is adequate.

10. Avoid alcoholic drinks before or during shooting.

YOU AND THE DRAFT



By Colonel Taylor L. Davidson

FRANKFORT—Are there substitutes for actual service in the military?

There are only two federal activities cited under selective service law that can be substituted for service in the military. They are Commissioned Corps of the Public Health Service (Department of Health, Education and Welfare), and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Certain conditions must be met in order to qualify as an individual having completed service (other than military) under the Military Selective Service Act.

The registrant must serve on active duty for a period of not less than 24 months in the Commissioned Corps of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration or the Public Health Service.

Such period of active duty in the Public Health Service, as a commissioned officer commencing after July 1, 1967, shall have been performed by the registrant while assigned to staff any of the various offices and bureaus of the Public Health Service, National Institutes of Health, Coast Guard, Bureau of Prisons, Environmental Protection Agency or the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

How does the new draft law affect divinity school students and divinity school graduates?

Under the old draft law, divinity students received an exemption from service. The 1971 amendments to the draft law change this to a statutory deferment, meaning that a young man is guaranteed this deferment providing he meets the requirements. The deferment is granted by the local board on proper verification of enrollment from the school.

Students preparing for the ministry under the direction of recognized churches or religious organizations, or who are satisfactorily pursuing full-time courses of instruction in or under the direction of recognized theological or divinity schools in which they have been pre-enrolled, shall be deferred from training and service, but not from registration.

Liability to the draft applies only to divinity school graduates who do not enter the ministry. Men who are working as fully ordained ministers are given a 1-D classification and are exempt from serving in the armed forces.

PRO-FOOTBALL

NFL By LARRY FELSER

The end of the Pittsburgh Steelers' 40-year drought is at hand. Unless there is an unforeseen collapse at the end of the season, the Burgh will have its first championship pro football team ever.

"We are in such a daze about all this winning," says Art Rooney, the Steelers' beloved "Old-Shoe" owner, "that the people in our office are starting to call me 'Mr Rooney'."

The Steelers are an example of patient building and skilled drafting. Most of the team's young stars — quarterback Terry Bradshaw, wide receivers Frank Lewis and Ron Shanklin, defensive tackle Joe Greene, fullback Franco Harris, linebackers Jack Ham and Andy Russell, and defensive ends Dwight White and L.C. Greenwood — are products of the draft.

Only guard Bruce Van Dyke and running back Frenchy Fuqua, among the major contributors, came in trades.

There are two essential elements in the pennant drive. One is the play of the pass rush. The other is the performance of Harris, a big, big rookie from Penn State.

Last season the Steelers were acknowledged to have the worst pass defense in the National League. This year, playing the same people, they have led the league in interceptions.

The answer is the improved pass rush. "With the rush we are getting," observes Russell, the all pro linebacker, "I could play quarterback."

Harris was overshadowed at Penn State by all America halfback Lydell Mitchell. Joe Paterno, the Penn State coach, was asked the difference between the two ball carriers.

"You ask Mitchell to run through a brick wall and he asks you, 'Where's the wall?'" says Paterno. "You ask Harris the same question and he will examine the bricks for texture, the wall for height-width, and the base atmospheric conditions. Then he'll say, 'Okay, I'll do it'."

Apparently Chuck Noll, the Steelers' coach, is getting all the right answers from Franco. The big fellow gained over 100 yards in four of five games during Pittsburgh's pennant push.

Art Rooney has not popped the champagne corks, yet, however.

"I remember a few years ago when we were in a pennant race with the New York Giants," he says. "We were leading the league in overall defense at the time we played the Giants in a game that was supposed to decide the race.

"Our public address announcer introduced the defense before the game as the best in football. Our own fans hooted and booed that announcement. They knew we had to prove the claim on the field.

"The Giants scored something like 60 points on us that day and we were out of the race.

"You can't fool the Pittsburgh fans. They've been disappointed too much in the past. They'll believe we are champions when we win a championship."
