

SUPPORTING LIBERTY Your community newspaper

With many governmental powers centered in Washington, D.C. and the state capital in direct control of the people and their representatives, it is our responsibility to inform and advise our citizens, to maintain our public works and supervise our shopping, it becomes increasingly essential to have a newspaper that reports on the news in a fair and objective manner.

When proposed powers for solving economic and other problems are gladly viewed, we see our newspaper role as informing and advising our citizens, to maintain our public works and supervise our shopping, it becomes increasingly essential to have a newspaper that reports on the news in a fair and objective manner.

This community newspaper provides the most complete coverage of social, political, educational and other news events in more detail than any other medium. We also try very hard to be the community's conscience.

Early to bed and early to rise, may you live and prosper. It is a well known fact that the early bird catches the worm. In the same way, the early riser gets the best of the day. LETTERS from our readers

Editor, The Carlisle Mercury: People are always wondering why the City of Carlisle is not doing more for its citizens. I am enclosing some material on a proposed editorial that was recommended by the City Council and which I hope will interest you. It is my personal opinion that the addition of Walnut Hill Horse Farm to our city would be a great asset to our community.

THE PLED TYPER

Making love has never been that important to American male. The guys down at the office were snickering and making remarks on a copying machine like mad the other day. When you get them into high gear like this, it seems like you're talking to a wall.

One of them had picked up an article from a newspaper claiming that American boys are loony loves. It was written by a doctor, who said that he had been studying his medical books instead of trying to specialize in something without proper internship and experience.

For once, though, this doctor's diagnosis was right. American boys are loony loves. Women's Lib proves this. The U.S. male has been up by putting his counterpart on top of the pedestal. He doesn't have the strength to climb up and kiss her. He is a lousy lover because he hasn't been home studying his medical books.

The Frenchman is noted for his amour because he doesn't let anything interfere with his love-making, not even war, work or wife. Important or how well it is all that important or worthwhile. Simply making love is the most important thing in the world ought to be enough. But it wasn't they had to be liked, too, when it was anybody's guess.

From the beginning, Americans have been busy carrying out a new country, new industries, new mortgages, they haven't had time to find around properly, they have ways folk. Not that the girls were exactly always waiting at the door in anticipation. When Paul Keever came home and announced he had saved the colonial army from annihilation and probably would
