Tuberculosis still serious problem

An examination of statistics for the first six months of 1972 shows an improving, but still serious, problem for Kentucky's Division of Tuberculosis Control, says Jerry Brimberry of the State Department of Health. He spoke recently at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Kentucky Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, held in conjunction with the Kentucky Thoracic Society.

Significant improvement has been made in effective at-home treatment for active TB patients. On June 20, 1971, 80.8 per cent of those patients had been examined in the preceding six months; that figure has now risen to 82.9 per cent. During the same period, the percentage of at-home cases on active therapy rose from 75.6 to 79.5; and those who had received a bacteriological examination went from 65.0 per cent to 70.6 per cent.

Between January and June of 1972, 464 new cases of TB were reported, bringing to 10,269 the number of cases on file. Of this number, 381 patients were hospitalized and 947 active cases that is, patients whose disease has not yet been arrested were at home. The remaining 8,560 cases on file in the register are classified as inactive, or patients whose TB has been arrested.

However, the TB Control Division still faces five critical problems.

—Less than half the state's TB beds are in use.

—193 active, at-home cases are not receiving adequate treatment.

—Almost 3,000 inactive cases have never received adequate treatment. Preventive treatment is an important part of reactivating TB.

—131 people who were in close contact with active TB had a positive skin test but are not themselves receiving preventive treatment. The TB Control Division is continuing its efforts to persuade these people to take advantage of anti-tuberculous drug therapy.

—There are still 15 Kentucky counties without any TB clinics, and supervisory TB patients on home treatment.

Seventeen counties established clinics between April and June, and additional clinics will be started as funds are available.

—A major concern is the fact that within this six-month period, 244 people in close contact with newly-identified TB patients have not been examined.

19 cases of active TB were discovered through checks among contacts of other TB cases. The Division is expanding its field efforts in order to provide improved follow-up of contacts and positive reactors.

Five local school officials attend board meet October 18

The School Management Team concept may prove to be the vehicle for accomplishing greater management efficiency in the school corporation, Robert L. Allen said. Allen, a member of the Newport Board of Education and vice president of the Kentucky School Boards Association (KSBA), was addressing 115 school board members and administrators attending the annual meeting of KSBA's central region at the Capital Plaza in Frankfort on Oct. 18.

Those who attended the meeting from Nicholas county are: W. Farley, superintendent of Nicholas County Schools; Billy Hunter, William Dampier and R.C. Willie Jr., all school board members; and Harry Warner, Director of Pupil Personnel.

"The management team concept has worked for business and industry, and there is no reason why an adapted approach cannot work in the management of our schools," Allen said. He emphasized an understanding of the plan, a commitment to the plan and open communications among all members of the team as being key factors in making the management team approach work.

Maurice D. Bement, executive director of the state School Boards Association, challenged school boards and administrators to actively participate in the current study of the Kentucky Foundation Program for Educational Research. Program for students must be answered by the thousands of lay citizens and educators taking part in the study. What kind of education program do the people of Kentucky want for their children, and how do they propose to finance the desired program?

"The study to improve the education program for our children could prove to be one of the most comprehensive and significant projects ever to be conducted by the citizens of this commonwealth," Bement said. He encouraged school board members, administrators and lay citizens to study the state's Foundation Program together and to offer recommendations for improving school programs for all of the children and youth of the state.

J.T. Clifton, KSBA legislative agent, commended the Governor and the 1972 Legislature for the enactment of legislation to better finance local school districts and for the legislation passed to improve public education.

Clifton told his audience that it is becoming increasingly difficult to operate a good school program, even when all are working together; he predicted that it might become impossible without a good, close working relationship between and among citizens, the legislative and local boards of education, he called for cooperation and a spirit of togetherness in the best interest of our children.

Herbert D. Liebman, a member of the Franklin County Board of Education, was re-elected as chairman of KSBA's central region for 1973. Dr. J.M. Broadus, a member of the Fayette County School Board, was re-elected as vice chairman of the region, and Roy Boudant, superintendent of the Franklin County schools, was again named secretary of the 31 school districts.

KSBA is the statewide association of the 150 local boards of education in the commonwealth. Its objective is improving education offerings for the children and youth of the state.

Health Departments to aid Women's Clubs

Local health departments are being called upon to help Kentucky Federation of Women's Club (KFWC) members learn about the need for greater emphasis on preventive health care throughout the state.

Commissioner of Health William P. McElwain, M.D., met recently with Mrs. Harold Mulchin, KFWC president, Valley Station, Mrs. Chryon Wallen, home life chairman, Louisville, and Mrs. Harold Collins, health and welfare chairman, Lexington, to discuss cooperative efforts in promoting health awareness during November. At KFWC's request, Governor Wendell H. Ford proclaimed November as Health Awareness Month. His proclamation calls on state agencies and local government to assist the women's clubs in carrying out their local programs.

"We want each Kentuckian to become aware of the need for regular check-ups and the availability of health services in his community," said Mrs. Collins.

Among other activities, KFWC's 13,500 members of more than 250 women's clubs are distributing packets of material about health, local health education programs and locally available health services. Some are conducting door-to-door marches to hand out the information. Others are giving away literature at shopping centers, schools and YTA meetings.

Fire call

The Carlisle Volunteer Fire Department answered a call Sunday night, Oct. 22 to the residence of John Barrett on Sycamore Hill. The Barrett garage was on fire and resulted in a complete loss. A false alarm was called in on Sunday night also.
