J. B. HARRIS

J. B. Harris, 95, Owingsville, Route 3, died Saturday, Sept. 23, 1972 at the Colonial Rest Home.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillie Holcomb Harris; six daughters, Mrs. Mildor Warren and Mrs. James Martin, both of Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Marvill Stator, Newton Falls, Ohio; Mrs. Willie Warner of Nancy, Pulaski County, Ky. To fill the third-most recent vacancy on the Kentucky State ASCS Committee, Warner John Paul Fuqua, Farmington, Tenn. and James C. Finley Sr., Tompkinsville, member of the ASCS program in the State.

The State Committee of Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service is similar in many respects to that of the directors. Their major responsibilities are to give general direction for all ASCS programs in the State according to Law, Regulations, and National Policy. Therefore, attention is on the development of State policies, reviewing plans and operations to insure efficient and good service to farmers and to represent the public interest in general. To help the State Committee in carrying out these broad responsibilities, each county has a county committee responsible for the administration of the farm programs in that county.

Warner, 63, is not new to ASCS and the farmers of Kentucky. Besides having served as a community committee member in Pulaski County for several years, he has been engaged in farming all his adult life.

Prior to 1955, Warner was a dairy farmer having developed and designed, with the help of the University of Kentucky Agricultural Engineers, the first Walk-Through Milk Parlor. "Though that was then a first for the dairy farmer, now they have more up-to-date milking methods," he comments.

Since 1955, Warner has changed his farming operation to consist of purchased Hereford cattle, and continues to raise tobacco, corn, hay and pasture. Also, he and his three sons feed out several hundred hogs each year.

In addition to his farming activities, Warner is president of Warner's Fertilizer, Warner's Automotive Sales, and Warner's Farm state programs. The amendment also assures that any source of air, water, noise or other pollution shall not be located where it would result in the violation of any pollution standard. Otherwise, the states could usurp the authority of local planning commissions.

Cook said it was foolish to assume, as the bill had, that the states knew more about local needs than the local authorities.

Senator Cook offers two amendments

Senator Marlow Cook offered two successful amendments to the Land Use Policy and Planning Assistance Act of 1972 during floor debate on the bill Tuesday, Sept. 19. The bill would establish a system under the U. S. Department of Interior, through the states, to help achieve economic and environmental sound use of land resources on a national basis.

Senator Cook's first amendment, which the Interstate Coordination of Land Policies section, would allow river basin commissions, regional development agencies and interstate compact commissions to participate in the coordination of land use planning and programs in interstate areas. The original language of the bill would have required these groups be reorganized. The Senator said this would have disrupted all programs made by these agencies in date. Cook's second amendment would require the states to have an adequate land use program within five fiscal years from enactment to complete land use and development goals in areas of critical environmental concern to assure local programs are not inconsistent with

SPOKE Conference at Transylvania

Transylvania University campus in Lexington will host the 1972 Student Program on Kentucky Enterprise (SPOKE) Conference, an annual event sponsored by Rotary Clubs throughout the Commonwealth.

A committee of local Rotarians and teachers will select five outstanding high school students to attend the Conference according to Henry Peters, Carlisle Rotary president.

The October 14 conference is expected to attract a record number of top students from high schools all over the state. Several Rotarians will participate.

Purpose of the conference is to present to leaders of tomorrow a basic understanding of the American economic system, the reasons for sound fiscal responsibility and to contrast opportunities available to young people in a profit-oriented economy as opposed to the absence of challenge in other economic systems.

An attractive program is on tap for the high school conference. Miss Lydia Hodson, America's Junior Miss for 1972, and Tommy Bell, lawyer and grid referee in the National Football League, will highlight a team of six speakers to be headed by Michael Meason, Georgia State University in Atlanta; Dr. Irvin Linger, president of Transylvania, and Dr. Carl W. Ingers, General Motors Corporation. Governor Wendell Ford will extend greeting remarks to the conference.

Additionally, musical entertainment will be furnished by the popular Tates Creek High School (Lexington) Choral Group.

Commendation letter honors Miss Kingsolver

A Letter of Commendation honoring Miss Barbara Kingsolver, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Kingsolver, for her high performance on the 1971 Preliminary Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) has been awarded the Nicholas County High School student, according to L. C. Jones, principal.

The National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) has named 37,000 Commended students in the United States. These students are among the upper 2 percent of those who are expected to graduate from high school in 1973. The Commended students rank high, but below the 15,000 Semifinalists announced in September by NMSC.

Edward C. Smith, president of NMSC, said: "Although Commended students advance no further in the Merit Scholarship competition, their standing in this nationwide program deserves public recognition. Their high performance on the PSAT/NMSQT shows promise of continued success in college."

"The Commended students should be encouraged to pursue their education since their intellectual talent represents an important and much needed national resource. Both these students and our nation will benefit from their continuing educational development."

The Commended student's names are reported in the colleges they attend as their first and second choices when they took the PSAT/NMSQT in October 1971. The reports include home addresses, test scores, and anticipated college major and career intentions of the Commended students. NMSC encourages these students to make every effort to continue their education.
