Masterful piloting averts air tragedy

An Ohio State University flight instructor and his rookie student safely crash-landed a university-owned trainer airplane about noon Saturday, April 21, at Port Columbus, Ohio.
Instructor Samuel R. Barlow III, 20, of Cincinnati, landed the two-seat Beechcraft Musketeer which was missing its right landing wheel in what officials at the scene called a masterful execution of textbook procedure. Barlow, of the grandson of S.H. Barlow, Carlisle, Barlow and his student, Bruce R. Kerns, 21, of 1300 Sunflower Drive, Port Columbus, were nervous and shaken from the incident, but neither was injured. Ohio State officials estimate the damage to the plane at less than $50.
About nine pieces of fire-fighting equipment and several rescue units were standing by. Barlow landed on runway No. 13 as the plane entered step as a landing support.
Fire officials said they were fearful of fire because the plane had about 25 gallons of fuel in its tanks when it landed. The plane lost its entire right landing gear as it took off for a flight training lesson about 10:15 a.m. from Don Scott Field, Ohio State's airport in Columbus.
Jack Eggspueber, chairman of Ohio State's Aviation Department, said Barlow handled the landing "masterfully," just as he has practiced regularly in case of an emergency.
"We work so hard making sure our students know how to handle dangerous situations like this and can handle them," he said. "You know it's all worth it at times like this."
Eggspueber flew alongside the crippled aircraft before the landing and reviewed the crash-landing procedure with Barlow.
Barlow flew over the runway twice to make sure he would hit the foam just right and insure he would shut off the fuel supply so sparks would not ignite the surplus fuel.
On his third approach, the pilot cut the fuel about an eighth of a mile from the runway and grabbed the stick while the student pilot prepared to shut off the plane's power on touch down.
Eggspueber said.
After the plane touched down, it veered about 20 ft off to the right of the form. Eggspueber said there was no gas left in the engine to catch fire from a spark.
Barlow said he was "nervous at first" but said the fun on the runway and Eggspueber's directions gave him confidence.
Barlow has more than 700 hours of logged flight time. He began flying when he was 16. Kerns had only been up for seven hours before Saturday.
"There wasn't much I could do," Kerns said. "Although I was scared, I don't think I'm going to give up flying."
T.D. Culley, a Federal Aviation Administration investigator, praised Barlow for his exceptional job. "He handled the situation so well, we're ruling the situation an incident, not an accident."
The right landing gear fell off because of its attachment fitting broke, Culley said. A report will be filed with the FAA ordering all Beechcraft Musketeers to be checked to make sure there is no similar structural weakness in other planes of the same type, he said. ## Weather and baseball improve for Jackets

Spring weather got better and so did Nicholas County's baseball team as Coach Bill Anderson's Blue Jackets won four and lost one last week. The Jackets beat Mason County, Clark County, lost to Sayre, and took a double header from Mayville, Saturday. This run the Jackets record to eight wins, one tie, and three losses.
The Jackets are winning with a strong hitting attack. The team has 106 hits for 122 games and a batting average of .325. Home run power by Billy Allison, Billy Darrell, and Gerald Hutto gave the Jackets two of the win this past week. Billy Darrell is a 7 to 10 in Mayville. Coach Anderson and Hutton in the last half of the seventh for 11 to 10 in Mayville. Darrell is leading the Jackets with 444 hits, followed by Hutton with 444 hits, and John Soper's 327.
Coach Anderson got a sharp performance from Olen Fryman in a 2 to 1 win over Mason County, however Fryman had to be removed from the Mayville game because of arm trouble. Doug Fryman is also winning, but bothered by a sore hand. Dennis Berry is out of the lineup with a wrist injury. Perhaps the best news was Ricky Hicks' job as a relief pitcher in both games against Mayville—a save in the first game and the winning pitcher in the second. Injuries may hurt at the Jackets are scheduled to play each day.
If this year's team can tighten their defense and get cooperation with the weather they have a good chance of becoming the Nicholas County team with the most wins in one season. They need it and it appears that Coach Anderson has the man power to do it.

Farmer's position needs explaining; agricultural exports could help nation

WASHINGTON—Senator Walter Dee Huddleston said this week that farmers and their supporters throughout the country need to do a better job of explaining the farmer's position to consumers and urban residents.
"Many consumers and city dwellers, unfamiliar with farm procedures and finances, have become accustomed to low food prices and tend to blame the farmer for the increases which have recently occurred," said Huddleston, who is a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee.
This lack of understanding, he said, could lead to the termination of such farm programs as price supports and acreage adjustments without replacement programs that would adequately protect the farmer.
"Many consumers and urban dwellers fail to grasp the relationship between farm price supports—a program which has helped the United States maintain the lowest food costs of any industrialized nation—and food prices," Huddleston said.
"They fail to understand that growing demands for higher quality foods coupled with various food shortages throughout the world have brought the existing situation upon us."
"To inform the consumers of the farmer's plight with the continuing increase in production costs—in land, machinery, labor, seed, fertilizer, and in the case of poultry and livestock farmers, of the extremely high cost of feed grains—and to convince our urban residents that our farm support program pay off in the longer run in terms of less expensive foods, is an increasingly important task for our farm population."
