Sixth grade science class launches balloons Friday

Friday morning at 10:30 a.m. the sixth grade at Nicholas County Elementary launched "Project Uplift." The sixth graders released 370 balloons with a post card attached to each group of three balloons. The post cards asked the finders to indicate when and where the balloons were found and to mail the cards to the school.

When the post cards are received at Nicholas County Elementary, the landing sites will be located on maps made by the sixth graders. The students will then be able to determine the distance and direction the balloons traveled and possible reasons why they landed where they did.

Project Uplift was correlated with all subject areas taught in the sixth grade through the use of an instructional packet designed by David Piersol, Fran Barnes, Marjorie Wilson, and Kathy Martin, sixth grade teachers at Nicholas County Elementary.

This project was financially sponsored by the Nicholas County PTA.

Breathitt boosted the original estimate to give education more money.

But the budget control caught this and Breathitt ordered a cutback for the last seven months of that fiscal year to balance the budget approved by the legislature. The budget always includes the safety clause for cutbacks to avoid an overrun.

Back to purchasing, a source inside the Purchasing Division said the department is extremely busy, but this is about the same as in past years. It's just a busy season for them every year.
