New food product beef-vegetable available

It looks like ground beef. It cooks like ground beef. It tastes like ground beef. Nutritional authorities give assurance that it contains the same amount of protein. It's called "Burger-Pro," and it costs 10¢ or more less than regular ground beef.

Louisville is getting its first chance this week to sample the ground beef-vegetable protein "burgers" which have been creating national attention as a way to attack the protein crisis and cut meat costs without sacrificing nutrients or flavor.

The 73 Kroger Food Stores in this area are putting the new protein product on sale this week at 77 cents a pound versus 89 cents a pound for regular ground beef.

Kroger's Burger-Pro is a mixture of 75 per cent regular ground beef and 25 per cent textured vegetable protein. TVP is made from soybean flour which is extruded to the size and shape desired. In this case, the granules approximate ground beef in shape and size.

Burger-Pro browns and cooks like regular ground beef and may be used in any recipe where regular ground beef might be used. There is somewhat less shrinkage, so patties and meat loaves come out a bit plumper than normal. The dry soy protein, as prepared before mixing, is virtually tasteless. It takes on the meat flavoring during cooking. A delicate degree of seasoning has been added to the vegetable protein to enhance its blending qualities with the flavor of beef.

The new Burger-Pro will be included in Kroger's ground meat information program. Signs posted at each store meat department will tell shoppers that Burger-Pro contains beef, water, textured vegetable protein and seasonings, with an aim of only 23% fat content - 7% less fat than the state limit for regular hamburger. Kroger guarantees the ingredients and discloses the fat content of each of its ground beef products.

Textured vegetable protein is not new to the food field. It has been used for years in various commercial products, such as meatballs, pizza, or sausage. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has approved its use in the school lunch program at a 30% level in combination with meat, fish or poultry. TVP can even be used to mimic completely other meats. One ohio company makes hams, bacon or steaks which taste and look like the real thing, and most households are familiar with the crisp bacon bits which have been marketed nationwide during the past couple of years.

The soybean is the most common source of the protein used in these new foods. Science Service, Inc., of Washington, D.C., says that weight for weight, the protein content of soybeans is greater than that of meat, eggs, milk, wheat and all other grains and legumes. Soybean protein closely resembles that of animal protein.

Further, as the demand for additional sources of protein grows in the U.S. and around the world, more efficient use of land also becomes important. Kroger believes that beef, pork and other traditional sources of protein will always be popular and the demand will remain high. However, it might at the same time be noted that an acre of land can produce ten times more edible protein if used for soy farming rather than cattle grazing.

Herbert Stone, food scientist from Stanford Research Institute, was quoted in the Wall Street Journal recently as noting that soy protein has been looked on as the food of the future. "But the recent meat price increases have brought the future a whole lot closer," he added.

Could it be that the old song favorite will be retitled by the year 2000 from "Home on the Range" to "Home on the Soybean Field"?

Two KU officials retire after 42 years

In 1931 two new graduates of the University of Kentucky College of Engineering started to work for Kentucky Utilities Company. This week 42 years later, all spent with KU, Harry M. Blanton and Harry W. Carloss retired as vice presidents of the company.

They were honored at a reception Monday in KU's Washington Reed Auditorium attended by 400 employees and friends.

Mr. Blanton, Paris, has been in charge of the company's governmental relations

High wire artist demonstrates Torino's incredibly smooth ride.

Just released: Gran Torino 2-Door Hardtop with new Luxury Decor Package and WSW tires.

It took a lot more than a smooth ride to make Ford Torino the best selling car in the mid-size field.

The closer you look, the better we look.

Optional AM/FM stereo radio with front and rear dual speakers.

Torino's instrument panel. All gauges are easy to read, controls within easy reach of driver.

Front disc brakes are standard on Torino. Power front disc brakes optional.

Behind Torino's smooth ride are better ideas in engineering. Like angle mounted shock absorbers for increased directional stability. Rubber body/frame mounts that help isolate the passenger compartment from road shocks. And a coil spring rubber-insulated front suspension that helps minimize noise and road vibration.

Inside you'll find expansive room up front. Plus the kind of luxury you'd expect from high priced automobiles.

So take a good, close look at Ford Torino for '73. Discover why it's become the best selling car in the mid-size field.

Optional electric rear window defroster. (Torino's major competitor doesn't offer it.)

Torino offers optional steel-belted radial ply tires on all models.

A longer wheelbase and wider front and rear track than major competitor, for a smooth, stable ride.
