CAMPING ALL YEAR ROUND BY FORD BOTHWELL

RV VS. STATION WAGON COSTS

No one has to be told that a family that stays in motels and eats restaurant meals. But how much less? And should this one fact make you a recreational vehicle owner?

There are two main variables to give a quick answer to that one, but some figures just released by the Recreational Vehicle Institute (RVI) may help you decide if your family's patterns fit the RV mode of life. Let's take two families, each traveling with two adults and two teenagers, on a 9-day vacation. One family has an RV, the other a station wagon. RVI breaks down their daily basic expenses like this:

RV FAMILY	STATION WAGON FAMILY
Gas (9 mpg) $ 12.54*	Gas (15 mpg) $ 7.60*
Breakfast 1.87	Breakfast & tip 7.00
Lunch 2.64	Lunch & tip 9.00
Dinner 4.00	Dinner & tip 23.00
Campsite (& hookups) 4.00	2 motel rooms 28.00
DAILY TOTAL 25.05	DAILY TOTAL 74.60
9-DAY TOTAL $225.45	9-DAY TOTAL $671.40

*Gasoline costs, which vary greatly depending on the type of unit, have been computed at 9 and 15 miles per gallon respectively, traveling 300 miles a day at an average price of 38 cents per gallon.

Keep in mind these are basic costs and do not include souvenirs, snacks and beverages, laundry, film, tolls, vehicle servicing, clothing, medical supplies, magazines, cigarettes and all other incidentals that would apply regardless of the method of travel.

Nor are they hard and fast figures. An RV family certainly eats in a restaurant occasionally, just as a station wagon family may picnic along the road. An RV opportunity for real-time economy, however.

Now, let's get back to those variables I mentioned. Keep in mind:

- RV families generally spend more weekends away from home and usually travel on vacation.
- After the original cost, an RV owner's major expense is gasoline. This factor should be explored before selecting which unit to buy.
- If buying a trailer, select one your towing vehicle can pull. If it's a pickup cover, make sure your truck can handle it.
- Most RV's have a long life expectancy, maintenance costs are minimal and resale and trade-in values are high.
- Before deciding to buy, consider carefully how much use the unit will get. Winter use, for example, can double its value to your family. On the other hand, using a unit only once a year on vacation makes it a poor investment. Weigh all of these variables beforehand.
- Don't forget that the initial price of your vehicle, spread out over the number of years you intend to use it, must be included in your future travel costs. But with frequent usage, you can come out ahead.
- FVI suggests: "Depending on the purchase price and number of trips taken, a recreational vehicle can pay for itself by eliminating expensive room rentals and restaurant meals. RV ownership makes weekend and vacation travel economically feasible for more people. Projecting all costs over the life of the vehicle, travel in an RV costs little more than living at home."
- But only you and your family can decide if the RV way of life is for you.
