Rep. Perkins urges Senate to grant school fund help

Rep. Carl D. Perkins of Kentucky testified before the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee holding hearings on education funds, and told the subcommittee unless each school district in Kentucky received the same amount of Federal money last September as it did from Federal funds last September, education will be thrown into turmoil.
Rep. Perkins got a provision inserted in the bill protecting Kentucky from losing Federal funds when the House bill was in the House, but because of its rules the House bill could not protect each school district.
The Senate operates under different rules, and Rep. Perkins urged that the protection be installed in the Senate bill. Then, when both the Senate and House bills are passed, the result will be that the school districts in the most needy areas will be those least able to cope with it—high poverty school districts in Kentucky and in the country.
The problem is caused by a statistical distortion in the number of children in different school districts who are from lower income families.
This distortion would be used to figure how the Federal funds in the program, which is called Title I, would be used, and the result would not be equitable—all children would not be treated fairly.
"I want to see this Congress correct the distortion," Rep. Perkins said.
Campaign officials after health and education committee chairmen and a congressman said that youngsters struggling for the breath of life.

Everyone is a youngster at heart, and every youngster loves a circus. Combining feats of skill and daring, amazing acts of animal antics, and spectacles of grotesque stunts on the stage and in the air, the circus offers family entertainment that is free from offensiveness or embarrassment.
The Clyde Bros. Circus, appearing at the Hotel Midway, Lexington, Aug. 12, 12, 13, appeals to the impressionable child, the enthusiastic teenager, and the sophisticated adult with a fast-moving program presented in keeping with the highest standards of decency and good taste.
The code of circuses binds management and performers to a pledge to provide enjoyment which is unswerving in its good taste. Allied performers, amazing animals, dazzling displays and capering clowns come from the five continents of the earth. They present an evening of varied entertainment in the arena and high above it. Each performer is unique in his appearance and act, but every one is united in his determination that the show will be as clean as it is clever.
So it's "Family Fun" at the circus. Thrills and spills, glitter and glamor, lovely ladies and comic clowns, demians of the jungles and agile artists in the air, pull out all the stops to bring you an evening resounding with unswerving fun.
A glamorous, glittering galaxy of entertainers await you when you attend the Clyde Bros. Circus at Lexington on Aug. 12, 12, 13! Don't let anyone tell you how good the circus is. See it for yourself!

Fibrosis Research
The goals of the Breath of Life Campaign are simple: to seek through research a control for the genetic disease, cystic fibrosis, while improving methods of diagnosis and treatment of children suffering many serious lung-damaging diseases," said Rev. Neil Thompson, campaign chairman in Carlisle.
"We have the volunteers, the organization, the scientists and the treatment centers," said Rev. Thompson. "We are hampered only by lack of money. That is why the Mid-South Chapter, National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation, is appealing for financial support to expand research and care through the Breath of Life Campaign.
The Breath of Life Campaign will take place in Carlisle from Sept. 3 to Sept. 21. Contributions may be sent directly to the Chapter office at 1112 Heyburn Building, Louisville, Ky. 40202.
"Obviously, we know more today than we ever have before, but we still have a long way to go before we've conquered C.F.," said Rev. Thompson. "Every dollar raised for the Breath of Life equity among all children.

"Cities and local educational agency provision is incorporated in the appropriations bill," Rep. Perkins said. A distorted distribution of funds will occur within the state. The school districts suffering the greatest hardship will be those least able to cope with it—high poverty school districts in Kentucky and in the country.

Trooper raids V.F.W.

Fines and suspended jail sentences were meted in Police Court Saturday after a state trooper reported entering the local VFW Post headquarters and confiscating a quantity of beer and hard liquor.
Judge Raymond Hall gave Marion Crawford a $100 fine and $14.50 costs and suspended 30-day jail sentence on his plea of guilty to a charge of illegal sale of alcoholic beverages in local option territory, and a $50 fine and a suspended 30-day jail sentence on a second charge—unlawful possession of alcoholic beverages.
The post commander, Lee Grey Jr., was fined a total of $99.50, including court costs, on charges of illegal possession of alcoholic beverages and disorderly conduct.
State Trooper Paul Harney told the court that he entered the VFW Post, South Walnut Street, on July 18 without presenting any identification and purchased an alcoholic beverage. Subsequently, he returned with a warrant charging Harney with the illegal sale.
A second warrant charging Crawford with unlawful possession on July 21. Harney said that when he went to the post in uniform, armed with a warrant, and rang the bell, Grey opened the door and, upon seeing the uniformed officer, attempted to slam the door shut but Harney stuck his foot in and gained entrance.

Trooper Harney reported that he and accompanying officers seized a total of 41 cases of cans of beer and "some bottles of hard liquor." The beer and liquor will be destroyed, the trooper said.
During the two incidents officers charged three other men with public drunkenness. Judge Hall fined away the costs against Kenneth Shannon and Charles Armstrong and levied a fine of $29.50, including costs, against Maxwell Bostick.

SUCCESS in MARRIAGE
by Professor J. Kenneth Williams
DEAR PROFESSOR WILLIAMS: My wife and I seem to be quite happy and compatible. We've been married 18 years. However, I would like to be made aware of certain "signs" which indicate a marriage could be heading for trouble. Could you help me on this?—J.B.
PROFESSOR WILLIAMS: This is a very good question. Yes, I can give you some help. The following points can indicate a marriage could be heading for trouble:
1. One of the spouses pays less and less attention to the other in showing consideration, love, affection and respect.
2. Arguments are increasing in numbers and intensity.
3. Lack of communication on the part of one or both in discussing family problems or other situations that can directly or indirectly affect the family.
4. Sexual indifference or even coldness.
5. One or both spouses never wanting to do anything or go anywhere together.
6. Excluding the other spouse more and more from one's activities and interests.
7. Developing new friends who may not be acceptable to the spouse.
8. Increasing evidence of untruthfulness, lack of compassion, possible unfidelielity, and general lack of respect on the part of one or both spouses.
Any one of two or even three of the above points does not necessarily mean a marriage is in trouble; however, more than this could spell trouble. To make home a desirable place will require much patience and understanding. But, if this is done consistently and with perseverance, it can be successful.
DEAR PROFESSOR WILLIAMS: How important is home life in the development of a child's personality? My husband and I have heard that the home is the key to one's mental and physical development. Would you comment?—Mrs. K.R.
PROFESSOR WILLIAMS: According to the latest knowledge in sociology, the kind of early home environment is the very basis for the development of personality. The type of personality traits one has is a direct reflection of the kind of early emotional interaction he has had within his family group. Whether a child is independent, self-centered or other-centered, extrovertive or extrovertive, and optimistic or pessimistic, depends upon the way he was treated or perceived this time he enters kindergarten and is not subject to any great modification. The changes in personality often referred to are really changes in social attitudes, not personality. Parents should provide a home atmosphere for their children free from arguments and other behavior that can become upsetting. Love and affection should be daily occurrences and the children should know, although disciplined from time to time, that they are accepted and very much desired in the family group.
