33 Nicholas high school youths working in Neighborhood Youth Corps locally

Thirty-three high school youths in Nicholas county are using their time constructively this summer by working in the Neighborhood Youth Corps. This is the seventh consecutive year that the Licking Valley CAP area which includes Fleming, Mason, Robertson, Bracken, Nicholas, Montgomery, Bath, and Menifee counties, has been funded for the program.

Local students and their assignments are: Police Station—Dora Thornsburg; High School—Raymond Willoughby, Richard Willoughby, Delma Snapp, Raymond Compton, Douglas Jones; Lake Carnico—Donald Bromagen, Johnny Dale, Tony Ring, Joe Leudenburg, Shelia McClain; Housing Project—Betty Trussell, Debbie Kenny, Mark Hobbs.

Elementary School—Sharon Crawford, Marsha Crawford, Debbie Craig, Sara Craig; Ball Park—Dwayne Williams, Clifford Thompson, Anthony Williams, Gerald Thompson; Health Department—Vanessa Williams; A.S.C.S. Office—Annette Pryor.

William M. Perkins, Executive Director of Licking Valley CAP Inc., reports that $152,151 has been allotted for the entire program and that it is the largest and best program the eight county area has ever had. At the present it is the third largest NYC program in the state.

With the money that was allotted approximately 500 students meeting O.E.O. guidelines have been placed to work in various public agencies. The enrollees are between the ages of 14 and 18 and are planning to return to school this fall. The program which terminates Aug. 17 allows each enrollee to work 32 hours a week at $1.60 per hour.

One of the program's main concepts is to encourage students to stay in school. By providing these students with work and the opportunity to make their own money, the NYC program has prevented many students from becoming one of the nation's dropouts. Other goals of the program are to teach good working habits by requiring adult supervision and to provide extra help for nonprofit organization's during the busy summer vacation months. Work sites in Nicholas county which have participated in the program include Extension Office, Hospital, Health Dept., Post Office, Nursing Home, and Superintendent's Office.

These youths doing such things as painting, general cleaning, maintenance work, typing and filing are at asset to the community and give us hope in the merits of young people.

Robert Carpenter is the N.Y.C. Director and Mrs. Roberta Prather is the Nicholas County Coordinator for the program. Both may be contacted in the Central Office in Flemingsburg, Ky., for information concerning the program.

Allen Earlywine, Police Chief; William Power, Mayor; and Dora Thornsburg, NYC worker.

State Fair Horse Show boosts Ky.'s Economy

There's more to a horse show than meets the uneducated eye, says William M. Munford, manager for the Kentucky State Fair Horse Show, well known.

For the first time, this year 800 center seats have been reserved at $15 per seat for the show, from Monday, Aug. 20 through Saturday, Aug. 25. These tickets, which include gate admission, are good for every session of the show. A few reserved seats are still available, Munford said.

General admission tickets also are available. Even though 40 new boxes were built this year, there is a waiting list for box seats, Munford said.

Many people make a mistake by attending the show only on Friday and Saturday nights, Munford said.

"Every night is championship night," he said, "and anyone who comes to any session of the show will not be disappointed. We feel like this yegr has more to offer than any previous years from the competitive angle. We feel like this will be an exciting event for all who come to watch and to take part."

I don't think a lot of people realize exactly how much the Kentucky State Fair and especially the horse show means to the economy of Louisville as well as the state of Kentucky," commented Munford.

Referred to as the World Championship Horse Show, the Louisville event provides a great economic boon to the $635 million tourism business in Kentucky through use of motel and hotel rooms, consumption of horse feed, and the purchase of tack and harness, Munford said.

For the economy of the state, the saddle horse industry means much more than the thoroughbred industry on a county level, Munford said.

"You only have pari-mutuel tracks in five counties in Kentucky, and the major race horse farms are fairly concentrated," he said. "But there are saddle horses all over the state and there are horse shows in every county. Because most shows are sponsored by civic organizations, the proceeds are returned to the community. Saddle horses also contribute through use of labor, feed and equipment."

In addition to its economic contributions, Munford said that another appeal of the saddle horse industry is its family-type involvement. Often in the same show, the entire family will participate in riding, training and grooming.

"This is unlike the thoroughbred or standardbred industry, where most of the involvement lies with the trainer and the rider or driver," said Munford. "Racing is a spectator sport whereas the horse show is a project that the whole family can actively participate in as well as watch."

The horse show is important to young people because of its competitive spirit and its opportunity for involvement, Munford said.

Munford has been a busy man since becoming manager of the 1973 State Fair Show. Managing the show is a year-round planning job that concerns setting up classes, contacting officials, printing prize lists, making entries, ordering trophies and obtaining class sponsors, in addition to a multitude of other details.

The gigantic ring inside the Fair and Exposition Center, where the show will be held, must be filled with 2,100 cubic yards of dirt, packed and covered with tanbark before it is ruled in top show condition. "It's a lot of work," said Munford, "but it's a lot of fun, too."

By tradition, the Louisville show is considered by horsemen as the world's championship for saddle horses. It is comparable to the Kentucky Derby for thoroughbreds.

The first five-gaited crown was won by Richelieu King in 1910. Since then, the show always has been held in Louisville. Because of its prestige, "this is where they want to win," Munford said.

This year there are 48 horses eligible for the coveted World's Five-Gaited Championship. Entries are up in all divisions by about 200 horses. The increase is because of improvements made during preparation for the show, Munford said.

New dirt and tanbark have been added for improved footing. Roadways have been improved to aid in better mobility in case of rain. Prize money is up $20,000 this year, to make the total $132,500.

Emergency medical technician training begins third year

The third year of a federally-funded project that's already trained more than 1,000 Kentuckians in emergency medical care of the public begins this fall in 18 Kentucky cities. Three courses will be held at the University of Kentucky's And, for the first time, "refresher" courses will be offered to some 400 EMT's (emergency medical technicians) who were trained two years ago.

Sponsored by the Kentucky Departments of Health and Public Safety, the EMT training program is made possible through a grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation to the Department of Health's Comprehensive Medical Emergency Service Project.

Tommy Thompson, project training director, says the course is designed for ambulance attendants, emergency room personnel, firemen, policemen, nurses, safety engineers, rescue squad and life squad members, industrial health and public health personnel. Registration is limited to 30 students per class. All registrants must be at least 18 years old.

EMT classes meet Mondays and Thursdays from 7-10 p.m. for 12 and one-half consecutive weeks. The 25 lessons involve 71 hours of classroom training plus 10 hours of in-hospital observation. The text, "Emergency Care and Transportation of the Sick and Injured," is supplemented with more than 20 hours of videotape instruction prepared by physicians from the University of Kentucky Medical Center, one of 15 health and education agencies cooperating in preparation and promotion of the course.

Classes are conducted by a local course instructor, a local physician, nurse or other emergency medical care expert.

Upon succesful completion of the course, the Department of Health certifies students as EMT's. The written and practical exam for the National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians is offered to the students immediately following completion of each course.

Certified EMT's, as well as licensed physicians, and registered and practical nurses are covered by the "Good Samaritan" law passed by the General Asembly in 1972. The law exempts these people from liability in civil damages for administering emergency care or treatment when pay for such services is neither expected nor given.

Additional information and advance registration forms for the EMT courses may be obtained from Thomas A. Thompson, training director, Emergency Health Services, State Department of Health, 275 East Main Street, Frankfort, Ky. 40601. A $15 enrollment fee must be submitted with each application.

"Refresher" courses are limited to those who received EMT certification two years ago. Therefore, those individuals who completed the course in 1971-72 will be notified by mail of course times, dates and sites.

NEW WHEELS for the Kentucky Department of Parks were displayed on the mall at Frankfort's Capital Plaza. Recreation Division personnel of the department examine some of the nature exhibits that will be featured on the new Kentucky State Parks Science and Nature Mobile Unit. From left are Chuck Rippey, state naturalist, Bill Marshall, assistant recreation director and Carl Stout, recreation director. The unit will be traveling to various parks and used to literally "roll in" a nature study for visitors. It will carry nature exhibits, aquatic life and even microscopes to study the minute designs of plant and animal life.

Kentucky Afield

Kentucky's hunters are some of the most safety-minded individuals anywhere. Out of an estimated 300,000 hunters, there were only three fatal hunting accidents in Kentucky during 1972.

While this is a good record, it is still not good enough. Our goal should be no fatalities at all. If each and every hunter would learn and practice the "Ten Commandments of Gun Safety," we could probably realize this goal.

The ten Commandments are as follows:

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the first rule of gun safety.

2. Guns carried into camp or home, or when otherwise not in use, must always be unloaded and taken down—or have actions open; guns should always be carried in cases to the shooting area.

3. Always be sure barrel and action are clear of obstructions, and that you have only ammunition of the proper size for the gun you are carrying. Remove oil and grease from chamber before firing.

4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble; keep the safety on until you are ready to shoot.

5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger; know the identifying features of the game you intend to hunt.

6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot; avoid all horseplay while handling a gun.

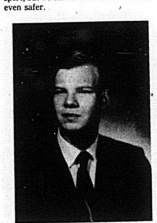
7. Unattended guns should be unloaded; guns and ammunition should be stored separately, beyond reach of children and careless adults.

8. Never climb a tree, fence or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.

9. Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water; when at target practice, be sure your backstop is adequate.

10. Avoid alcoholic drinks before or during shooting.

Practice these 10 major rules of safe gun handling and encourage all those you know to do the same. Hunting is a safe sport, but we all need to work to make it even safer.



William H. Gaunce

Phi Kappa Phi initiates Gaunce

William Harvey Gaunce, a senior at Morehead State University, was honored July 30 by being initiated into the Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi. Membership is awarded on the basis of scholarship and character and is by invitation only.

The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi was founded at the University of Maine in 1897. To be eligible for membership, in addition to other requirements, a student must be enrolled in the final term of the junior year and rank scholastically in the upper five per cent of the junior class with a point standing of at least 3.7 out of a possible 4.0, or be a senior and rank in the upper ten per cent of his class. Mr. Gaunce was recognized aside from the other initiates because he was the first person in the Morehead State University Chapter's history to be accepted on the basis of his Junior standing.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harvey M. Gaunce of Carlisle, who attended the initiation and banquet held in the Red Room of the Adron Doran University Center.

Jar " Spring semester begins. Mar. 9-17—Spring break. May 6-10—Final examinations. May 11—Spring semester closes. May 12—Commencement.

State Fair to have 'Senior Citzens Day'

Tuesday, Aug. 21, has been designated "Senior Citizens Day" at the Kentucky State Fair.

There will be a large tent on the west lawn of the Fairgrounds especially for senior citizens. Entertainment there will be provided by Smiley Corbin playing his calliope.

Special seats will be available for the senior citizens during the Circus Internationale, which has two shows daily at 2:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m.

Free tickets to the Kentucky State Fair World's Championship Horse Show will be given to the senior citizens on their day. Both afternoon and evening shows will be held.

State Fair officials point out that before 11 a.m. each day a car load or even a bus load of people will be admitted to the fair for $1. They expect large groups of senior citizens from throughout the state to take advantage of the low entry fee, the officials said.
