72 record year for South Central Bell

South Central Bell Telephone Company construction expenditures during 1972 amounted to $72 million, the highest figure ever spent by the company in Kentucky. The total reflects an increase of roughly $13 million more than the previous year.

"It was a busy year for the company across the state as well as locally," commented C.A. Harris, South Central Bell manager in Nicholas County.

"Reaching the one million mark in telephone lines is a fitting end to a productive year."

Among important local projects were a $2,000 addition to our central office on Chestnut Street to provide more customer equipment; placing cable to provide more lines for new lines and improve service to old customers along the Myers Station Road. This was an $18,000 project. Plans for 1973 call for an $22,000 expenditure in the Headquarters area.

More than 54,000 telephones were added to the Kentucky network served by the utility, the largest in the state. South Central Bell operates in 77 counties in the Commonwealth, serving some 600,000 customers.

Harris estimated the number of telephones added locally to 23, bringing the total served by South Central in Nicholas County to 320.

"To add those telephones took more work and involved more money than most people realize," said Harris. "We spent our share of the $72 million total here with projects designed to improve and expand telephone service for our local customers."

Throughout the state the telephone company completed hundreds of large and small construction projects as it spent more than $106,000 a day.

"And remember," said Harris, "1972 was a leap year so that is $196,000 a day for 366 days."

A great deal of our construction money was spent on what we call outside plants. That includes cables, lines and associated equipment," Harris explained.

For example, the telephone company spent $180,000 on 15,000 of underground and aerial cable in west Frankfort to provide for future growth in the area.

"We had other projects in this general area, too," said Harris. "We spent $22,000 on a large project near Chestnut, $5,000 for new cable to replace an old cable route in Georgetown near Madison, and $3,000 for a new cable to replace a 48,000 cable replacement project in Cynthiana."

expert subsidies, rural housing, water and waste disposal grants, and the water bank program.

"All of these programs have played and continue to play a vital role in the development of Rural America," he said.

"You cannot suddenly slash and cut out such projects and programs without seriously damaging the economic and social structure of rural areas."

Sen. Huddleston this week praised the President's announcement that a peace agreement had been reached in Vietnam.

"We can rejoice that our prisoners of war will be returning home to their families, and that we will receive an accounting of the missing in action," Sen. Huddleston added. "Hopefully, we as a nation can now set about solving some of the problems we have here at home and establishing the conditions necessary to prevent our involvement in another war."

Each of these projects and literally hundreds of smaller ones provided increased service facilities to growing areas and locations where growth is needed.

"Most people are not sensitive to the need all telephone companies have to stay a jump ahead of local growth," Harris said. "When we get into a position of trying to catch up with community and business communications needs, everyone suffers."

"Last year was the biggest growth year we have experienced," Harris explained. "But we are getting ready for an even greater expansion of communications services during 1973."

like Vietnam."

The Senator also announced plans to introduce legislation providing for the construction of a national monument in Washington to honor all Americans who served in Vietnam.

"In the exploration that will come with the end of this tragic war, we must never forget the sacrifices which have and been made by thousands of our young countrymen," he said. "The nation owes these young men much more than we will ever be able to repay, especially those who fought and died, suffered permanent injury, or served terms as prisoners of war."

Machinery show opens Feb. 14 in Louisville

Butler looks at Agriculture

Feb. 14 will be a big day for Kentucky farmers, agricultural leaders and agribusiness interests as a number of groups will be meeting in conjunction with the opening of the 1973 National Farm Machinery Show at the Fair and Exposition Center.

The Farm Machinery Show, which will run from Feb. 14 through Feb. 17, is one of the largest such shows in the world. Over 11 acres of exhibits will be on display this year, showing the latest in farm and agricultural equipment.

As for the special meetings, both the Kentucky Agricultural Council and the Kentucky Livestock Improvement Association (KLIJA) will be holding their annual meetings at the Fair and Exposition Center, starting at 10:30 a.m. The State Board of Agriculture will be meeting at 9:30 a.m., just prior to the official opening of the Machinery Show.

The Farm Power and Equipment Dealers will be concluding their annual convention, which is held each year the days just preceding the Machinery Show.

The Ag Council and KLIJA will sponsor a joint luncheon at noon. Tickets to this event are available to non-members, and reservations should be made with the Division of Information and Promotion, Kentucky Department of Agriculture, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Members of the groups holding meetings in conjunction with the Farm Machinery Show will of course want to attend this meeting if at all possible. However, it would be hoped that every farmer will make an effort to attend this show, because he can see in one area the latest in equipment, tools, chemicals, etc., that are being designed and manufactured for today's agriculture. The tractor pulling contest, a great show in its own right, will be held in the evenings. Tickets or other information is available from the Fair and Exposition Center office.

"HE WANTS TO MAKE YOU HAPPY"

Never sell a car to a friend, they say, because you love the friend.

We disagree. We're your local Ford Dealer and we sell cars to friends every day. And we haven't lost one for years.

One reason: of course, it's our cars. We have the popular Ford and Lincoln cars to sell. But you can't sell cars like this unless you sell them to someone who really cares about cars.

When you buy a car, you don't want just another cash-and-carry transaction or a messy procedure of cars and trucks they make.

We take you more seriously than that. We make you our friend. We want to see them to you one by one. It is not to us to keep each of you happy you bought a Ford. And we know it.

So our real job is to get you together with the best Ford for your needs, your chances, and for that team to your eye.

Everybody who buys a car has a plan. It's not to get it as good a plan as this.

And we know this subtle works. We know it's a plan to get a good car. It's not with us. We check each car for that good reason.

See what it's like to deal with someone who really wants to make you happy. See your friendly Ford Dealer.
