Interior design is a trendy competitive field. Although "decorating" and "designing" are sometimes used interchangeably, design connotes a higher professional skill than decorating.

Interior designers, after graduation, usually start as apprentices (1-3 years) in interior design firms, or as sales trainers in home-furnishings departments of stores. To learn about other jobs, advancement and pay, you can write to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. 20540, ask for "Occupational Outlook Report No. 32, Commercial Artists, Interior Designers & Decorators."
