Comeback cut short, Jackets drop eighth

by Pat Conley

Tollesboro's "not-so-wild" Wildcats, stayed off a courageous comeback attempt, and held on to trim a cold-shooting Nicholas County crew, 62-60.

The Jackets seemed to be hopelessly lost, trailing by 19 in the third frame, but they put together an inspired fourth quarter which very nearly turned the tables completely. Nicholas managed to knot the score at 58-58 with a minute and a half left to play, but blew their chances at the free throw line, where Tollesboro sank four of five in the waning moments and the locals missed two out of three.

In fact the game's outcome could very well have been altered considered by a statistic shift at the foul line. 21 of the winners' 65 total scoring came on free throws. Nicholas hit six of 16 free throws. The second half saw Tollesboro shooting 21 chunky balls, while Nicholas was awarded five.

The Cats' star of stars was little guard, Mike Applegate, who broke the Jackets' backs with 14 free throws and seven field goals. Applegate, who at 5' 8" is certainly not an imposing figure, drove the lane almost at will, besides showing deadly accuracy from six to ten feet out. The tiny playmaker flipped in six field goals in the second quarter, where his team outscored the Jackets 23-12.

Coach Bill Anderson sent in the press late in the second quarter, but no defense could counterbalance 22% shooting as Nicholas canned only 10 of 45 in the first half.

Freshman guard, Gerald Thompson, came off the bench to spark Nicholas with seven field goals. Thompson had three field goals during the Jackets' brilliant rally.

Nicholas utilized 51 rebounds in getting off 20 more shots than Tollesboro, with Fryman and Hatton combining for 32. Thompson grabbed seven.

Coach Anderson summed up the game by attributing defeat to the second quarter inability to hit free throws. When asked for any specific strategies used in his team's courageous comeback effort, Anderson commented that "mainly we just hit the bucket in the second half." Nicholas hit 18 of 39 in the second half for a game total of 32%. Tollesboro wasn't much better with 22 of 64 for 34%, but free throws made the deciding difference.

The victory was the first for Tollesboro this year, while Nicholas' record dipped to 4-8.

Next week it's Rowan County away on Friday and Hazel Green at home on Saturday.

Nicholas County (60): Fryman 18, Thompson 14, Jones 8, Darbro 8, Hicks 2, Compton 2, Hatton 8.

Tollesboro (65): Applegate 28, Ginn 10, Hughes 11, Lashbrook 2, Cunningham 6, Stout 8.

Tollesboro	15	38	51	65.
Nicholas County	12	24	37	60.

Cook reports on social security

Senator Marlow Cook said recent calculations made by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington show that Social Security beneficiaries in the Commonwealth of Kentucky will receive an additional $64 million in calendar year 1974 as a result of legislation which passed Congress in 1972.

Senator Cook noted the total amount — based on old-age, survivors and disability insurance benefits plus Medicare payments — would be $1,016,000,000 for 1974.

In the same year, the Senator estimated, 17,000 Kentuckians are to get benefits, or additional benefits, by reason of a liberalized "retirement test", while 58,000 widows or widowers are to get increased benefits under new provisions for computing their benefit amounts.

Also 37,000 people will gain hospital insurance protection under new Medicare provisions.

Cook concluded that none of the figures take into account benefits of the new Supplemental Security Income program which provides for the needy, aged, and the disabled through an income base of $130 a month for a single person, or $195 for a couple, which will become effective Jan. 1, 1974. (This program will be financed from general revenue funds rather than Social Security taxes.)

Men's Wear workshop scheduled

The Cooperative Extension Service is sponsoring a men's wear workshop on Jan. 22, 10:00 a.m. in the East Kentucky RECC building on Route 60 on the outskirts of Winchester. A pot-luck lunch will be served. Bring either sandwiches, salad or cookies. Drinks will be furnished.

Mrs. Martha Jenks and Mrs. Betty Overly, County Extension agents, are in charge of the program. Miss Sandee Singer, Home Economist from Arnix Company, Chicago, will give a lecture demonstration on construction of men's jackets and slacks. She will demonstrate the use of interfacings, linings and interlinings, the jacket shell and pocket construction.

Rick Huffstutter, men's wear clothing from Graves, Cox will speak on style trends in men's fashions and selection of ready to wear.

The public is invited to attend.

Teenage girls 13-17 eligible for contest

Final preparations are now being made for the Miss Kentucky Teen-ager Pageant to be held at Lafayette High School Auditorium, Apr. 28.

The reigning Miss Kentucky Teenager, Peggy Harrell, of Morehead, will crown Miss Kentucky Teen-ager, 1973. Peggy was first runner-up at the National Pageant in September of 1972.

Contestants will be judged on scholastic achievement—leadership, poise—personality, and beauty. Each contestant will be required to write a 100 word essay on the subject, "What's Right About America."

The Miss Kentucky Teen-ager Pageant is an official State Finals to the Miss National Teen-ager Pageant to be held in Atlanta, Ga. Each Miss Kentucky Teen-ager will receive a scholarship, other prizes, and an all-expense paid trip to the National Pageant.

Applications may be obtained by writing Mrs. Jeff Shaffer, Executive Director, 215 Piedmont Ave. NE, Atlanta, Ga., or call Area code 006/659-4610 or 404/659-2964.

The Pageant is open to girls 13 through 17 years of age as of Sept. 1, 1973.

Jan. 31 deadline for Wage-Tax forms

All employers in the state must furnish each employe a wage and tax statement by Jan. 31.

This reminder was issued by William R. Reed, director of the Income Tax Division of the Kentucky Department of Revenue.

The wage and tax statement must be the official form furnished by the department, Internal Revenue Service, (K-2), or a commercially-printed form previously approved by the department.

Simultaneously, employers file reports of all forms with the Revenue Department along with payments of tax withheld.

Employers filing monthly and quarterly returns with the state will file form K-3 with the final payment, Reed said. Form K-3B is issued by employers filing annually.

A 30-day extension for employers unable to meet the Jan. 31 deadline may be secured. Such extensions will be granted only if requested in writing to the Department of Revenue, Income Tax Division, Frankfort. No request will be considered if the postmark date is later than Jan. 31.

Employers securing extensions must notify employes of the extended date.

Interest at the rate of eight per cent annually will apply to tax payments deferred for the length of the extension, Reed said.

Savings and loan jr. execs to meet

James B. Ramsey, President of the Kentucky Savings and Loan League, Inc., announced today that the junior executives of member associations will hold their annual conference Feb. 3, at the Holiday Inn North in Lexington. Ramsey has appointed Lloyd J. Smith Jr., of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Lexington, as the conference chairman. One of the highlights of the conference is a five-minute speech contest. The winner of the state speech contest will represent the State of Kentucky at the national contest. Richard D. Edwards, of the First Home Federal Savings and Loan Association, Owensboro, is the chairman of the speech contest.

Thomas Micklos, Director of Home Study for the American Savings and Loan Institute, Chicago, will be one of the featured speakers at the luncheon. James B. Ramsey, President of Mutual Federal Savings and Loan Association, Somerset, will also appear on the noon program.

INSIDE TV By JOEY SASSO

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT — All of you MILTON BERLE fans should be pleased to know that "Uncle Miltie" is returning to television next season. He will star in a series of six 90-minute specials. The shows will be shot in Las Vegas and will utilize the talents of the Las Vegas strip entertainers. I know of one actress who recently starred with Berle on the legit stage who will greet that bit of news with a "lots-of-luck" comment. She found Uncle Miltie "impossible" to work with . . . DAN ROWAN and DICK MARTIN, in honor of their 21st anniversary as a comedy team, tossed one of the most elaborate bashes Hollywood has seen in quite some time . . . DORIS DAY's steady-dating singer-actor-composer PAUL HAMPTON, who's just as blond as she and many years younger . . . Just before a big rock concert, some teeny-boppers broke into David Cassidy's dressing room and made off with all his underwear. Since David had to wear something under his skintight white jumpsuit, a young usher lent David his shorts . . . BOB HOPE had a two-hour meeting with the Duchess of Windsor in Paris, France, during which he offered to pay a substantial fee to her favorite charity, the American Hospital. In return, though, she was asked to do a short stint on one of Bob's TV specials. The Duchess declined for the time being, explaining that she was still in mourning for her late Duke.

HOLLYWOOD TV TICKER — LUCILLE BALL, still not fully recovered from a broken leg, was warned by medics to take some strict precautions during her strenuous dance routines in the film version of "Mame." Lucy was told that any accidental fall might throw the leg out of whack again . . . SIR LAURENCE OLIVIER just couldn't ignore the fabulous money he was being offered to make a one-minute TV commercial, so he finally said yes . . . PAUL LYNDE and VINCENT PRICE both deny that they are feuding. But that doesn't explain why they don't even pass the time of day when the "Hollywood Squares" TV cameras are off . . . SANDY DUNCAN fans (including me) can relax. In spite of Sandy's TV show being cancelled as of mid-season, she will be back on television next year in a new show. Meanwhile, she will be doing guest spots. She is still dating DR. TOM CALCITERRA, among others.

BACKSTAGE WITH THE STARS — The Tonight Show's ED McMAHON, who left his wife of 27 years in one of 1972's slurpiest celebrity divorces, is dating a beautiful young girl who reportedly can match him drink for drink. She is CHERYL MILLER, 27, who as a young girl played the role of a daughter on TV's "The Donna Reed Show," and who more recently starred in 'Daktari." The fetching blonde was rumored last summer to be in line for a Playboy nude spread. However, the photos never have appeared in the magazine. A top Hollywood source told me that McMahon, who for years has been JOHNNY CARSON's foil on The Tonight Show, regards the lovely Cheryl as his only female interest. This would seem to conflict with what McMahon, 50, told his badly upset wife, ALYCE, when they split last spring. At that time, according to Mrs. McMahon, the portly announcer insisted he wanted only to live alone and be alone. My Hollywood source did say that McMahon seems to be keeping an emotional distance from his new young companion, and may not actually be in love with her.

CAMPING ALL YEAR ROUND

BY FORD BOTHWELL

TRAILER SAFETY HINTS

Some frequently asked questions involving trailer safety are posed by L.P.F., of Lauderhill, Fla. We'll take them one by one:

Q.—Where should I go to have my hitch checked to determine if it is really strong enough to pull my 20-foot trailer?

A.—First, compare the maximum weight capacity of your hitch with your trailer's tongue weight. Both can be obtained from the manufacturers. (Caution: The manufacturer's tongue weight will be for an empty trailer, not fully loaded, as you pull it on the road. Allow for the extra weight.)

Hitches come in three classes. Class 3 for travel trailers. Assuming you have the latter, it is safe if properly installed. Have it checked by a recognized dealer who does hitch work. Take your trailer with you (fully loaded, gas and water tanks full) and have him weigh the tongue weight and check your hitch capacity.

Q.—While pulling my trailer now, I get a terrible amount of sway and when large trucks pass me on turnpikes, I often run off the road. I have, in addition to my hitch, torsion bars, but I have been told I need sway bars and levelers. I want to make sure I go to a place that is not just interested in selling me something.

A.—Torsion bars (or equalizing hitches) throw one-third of the tongue weight back on the trailer and the remaining two-thirds between the towing car's front and rear axles, keeping your suspension level. They, too, are rated according to tongue weight and should be used on any Class 3 hitch.

Sway bars do what the name implies — reduce sway and lessen the shock from passing trucks and buses. They should be used on any trailer 17 feet or over.

By levelers, I assume you are referring to your car's suspension. Overload springs are a big help; air shocks are better.

My advice to L.P.F., or any camper in the same situation: Check your hitch and torsion bars for proper installation and tongue weight capacity, install sway bars immediately and when your present shock absorbers need replacement, install air shocks. Incidentally, I wouldn't return to any dealer who sold you a 20-foot trailer without sway bars.

A final note: Properly adjusted rigs may still produce sway if the tow bar isn't rigid (often detectable only under towing conditions), if the trailer is loaded with too much weight in the rear or on one side, if the car's front wheels need alignment and if there is improper or uneven air pressure in the car and/or trailer.

Q.—When pulling trailers in mountainous terrain, how difficult is it, and any ideas on how to make the pull uphill easier?

A.—The key to pulling a trailer anywhere, but especially in mountainous terrain, is whether the towing vehicle's horsepower and other capabilities are equal to the weight of the trailer. Check with your automobile dealer. If in doubt, avoid extremely steep mountain roads, even if it means going out of your way.

When going downhill, put your car in the same gear you would use if coming up. Check weather conditions in advance. Be wary of overheating in the summer, and be extra cautious in high winds. Slow down and, if necessary, pull off the highway.

Club to honor players and coaches

The Commonwealth Athletic Club will honor the college and high school football coaches and players of the year as selected by Inside Kentucky Sports magazine at a special banquet in Louisville, Jan. 22.

The banquet, to be held at the Galt House, will honor Lee Corso of the University of Louisville, selected as the Kentucky college coach of the year by the statewide sports publication; Howard Stevens of the University of Louisville (Kentucky college player of the year); Mike Northington of Louisville Thomas Jefferson High School (High school player of the year); and Roy Walton of Lexington Tates Creek High School (Kentucky high school coach of the year).

The four were chosen by a select panel of coaches, sports writers and sportscasters for the magazine.

The college awards are of special interest since it is the first time any statewide publication has selected the best player and coach from the Commonwealth's nine football-playing schools.

Corso, a dynamic young coach, led the University of Louisville to a tie for the Missouri Valley Conference championship and only a freakish 28-26 loss to Tulsa kept the Cards from winning the MVC outright and a possible bowl trip.

Stevens, one of Corso's crew, attracted national attention by setting all kinds of records, including becoming college football's all-time leading rushing and scoring leader. He scored 69 touchdowns, rushed for 5,297 yards, scored 418 points, had an all-purpose running record of 5,467 yards and an average of 198.9 per game.

Northington, a fleet 5' 10", 165-pound senior halfback, scored 63 touchdowns in a career that saw him gain over 1,000 yards rushing in three different seasons. He scored 412 career points, including 180 in 1971, making him the only Louisvillian ever to win the state scoring title. In 1972 he scored 138 points.

Walton pushed his Tates Creek team to a perfect 13-0 record and the state Class AA title. Walton edged out Louisville Trinity's Jim Kennedy who had an 11-0 season and captured the AAA championship.

The Commonwealth Athletic Club is best known for its Rupp Trophy presentation which is given annually to the outstanding college basketball player in the nation. The selection of the Rupp trophy winner is made by the U.S. Basketball Writers Association and other selected sports writers and broadcasters and is presented each April in Lexington.

PRO-FOOTBALL

grading in every game as a senior.

Bert Jones-LSU quarterback — Big, strong arm; intelligent. He knows all about the pro passing game because his pappy was a star for the Cleveland Browns and once scored six touchdowns against the Chicago Bears. As Abe Gibron, the current Bears coach says, "he comes from good stock."

Darryle Singley, Purdue wide receiver — Played a part of everything in college, but as a pro he'll concentrate on catching passes. Runs a gorgeous sideline route, the bread-and-butter play of commercial passing football.

Burgess Owens, Miami quarterback — Steve Holden, Arizona State's outstanding receiver, "wore" Owens in the Senior Bowl. Burgess saved four potential touchdowns that day with great plays. As a bonus to go with his speed and quickness, he has the upper body of a weight lifter.

Chuck Foreman, Miami running back — Reminds the pros of Washington's Charlie Taylor with a running back in his early days. Foreman is more agile as a ball carrier, however.

Charlie Young, Southern California tight end — the tight end is the essential weapon in beating zone pass defenses now. A dozen teams need one and Young is the best in this year's crop.

And a sleeper, quarterback Ron Jaworski of Youngstown — Everyone was going to steal him in the 10th round. Then he went to the Senior Bowl as a last-minute substitution and nearly stole the show. He sets up and releases the ball in the style of his idol, Joe Namath.
