Scout jamboree biggest ever

North Brunswick, N.J.—"Jamboree or bust." That's the cheer nearly 70,000 Scouts and volunteer leaders will shout when they arrive for the 1973 National Scout Jamboree in early August.

They'll be heading for 7 days of excitement and adventure in northern Idaho at Farragut State Park, and in western Pennsylvania at Moraine State Park. Jamboree '73 marks the first time the Boy Scouts of America will be holding a jamboree in two different sites. Jamboree '73 will also be the largest in the world jamboree history.

Jamboree-west is scheduled from Aug. 1-7, while its eastern counterpart will run from Aug. 3-9.

To the thousands of jamboree visitors expected each day from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., jamboree '73 will undoubtedly refund them of their hometowns.

However, instead of neatly kept rows of houses, Scouts will be hanging their hats on tentpoles. To a visitor, the jamboree scene will look more like a several-thousand-acre "tent city" carnival, instead of a quiet neighborhood.

No boy at the jamboree will ask, "What's there to do?" He will be trying to do everything. After all, jamboree '73 will be a lifelong experience he will be able to share with his grandchildren.

Some of the daytime activities will include fishing, swimming, boating, sports competition, plus the popular new compass sport of orienteering.

Several miles of hiking trails will afford vistas of the surrounding park areas, the wildlife—and a chance to examine extensive environmental exhibits, demonstrations and examples of ecology actually at work.

Weather bureau stations will receive weather satellite photos; beverage cans will be processed for recycling; and Scouts will monitor the air and water at each site.

The Skill-O-Rama areas will provide Scouts and visitors with hundreds of demonstrations and exhibits. These include everything from a Hawaiian pig roast to log-rolling and folk dancing.

A new feature of jamboree '73 will be an Arts and Science Expo, where everything from watercolors and designed fabrics to clay sculpture and original music composition will be entered.

Picket fences have been replaced to include each troop's colorful gateway, and the convenience of mom's delicate home cooking will be substituted with a do-it-yourself campfire.

The dishes may not match those of Sardi's or Romanoff's, but jamboree Scouts, nevertheless, will be eating in grand style.

Over 200 tons of charcoal will be used for "kitchen experiments."

Some one million quarts of milk will be consumed, along with 200,000 loaves of bread, and 100,000 peaches.

When stomachs are full, and the dishes are done, jamboree evenings will offer campfires, singing, and a chance for some serious dialogue on the major issues of the day, which have aroused the concern of young people.

After it's all over, and the hundreds of colorful tents have been neatly packed and stored away, addresses have been exchanged along with life experiences, and the jamboree Scout will depart with a keener sense of himself and his brothers; indeed a learning experience in human relations of "Growing Together."

As Chief Scout Executive Alden Barber puts it: "The jamboree gives a boy a window on his own country he could not get in any other way."
