Mrs. Billy Keen Anderson presents program on analysis

Mrs. Billy Keen Anderson, Nicholas County High School guidance counselor, presented a program on transactional analysis to the Ladies Junior Woman's Club at the Nicholas County Library for the Home Life Department.
Mrs. Anderson's talk was based on Thomas A. Harris, M.D.'s book, "I'm O.K.—You're O.K." She explained that the first five years of life are of tape recording from the mother and father representing the parent. The child is the feeling part of an individual. The adult has both the input from the parent and the replay from the child; it's the middle or working personality. The adult is older and is the decision maker.
"All behavior is learned," said Mrs. Anderson. "The dominant position is for a child to feel 'I'm not O.K.—You're O.K.'"
Another part of the club's program was provided by Miss Jane Snider, Nicholas County Schools art teacher. Miss Snider had an exhibit of students' work on display.

The Home Life Department emphasized March as Gift of Life Month and distributed Uniform Donor Cards. The cards designate an organ of the body that can be donated after being checked and witnessed. The cards should be carried by individuals and the donor should inform someone in his family of his wishes.
The club voted to sponsor the Story Hour at the Nicholas County Library during the summer.
Guests at the meeting were home economics student teachers at NCHS, Moses Hughes, Yates and Kuhn.
Mrs. Charles Judge, CFWC president, announced that members were making 19 eating vests for the Johnon-Mathers Nurseries.
Mrs. Marshall Stone gave the spiritual values.
Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Jimmie Hall, Mrs. Tom Metcalfe, Miss Jane Snider and Mrs. Marshall Stone who used A. Patrick's theme.

Depending upon the enthusiasm of the gardener and the condition of the weather, several vegetables can be planted or the seed sown in March. Starting around the middle of the month, cabbage, kale, lettuce, mustard, onion, peas, potatoes, radishes, and turnips can be put in the ground. In earlier years of gardening, it was almost a religion to "plant potatoes during the 'dark nights of March.'" It was generally believed that if planted during the dark of the moon, potatoes would grow deep in the ground and produce a better crop.
Davis makes no comment one way or another on this rule but does advise getting potatoes in the ground around March 15. He also suggests that gardeners pick up a copy of the UK Cooperative Extension Service circular 39, entitled "Home Gardening." This publication, which is filled with much good information on gardening and raising vegetables, is available at most county Extension offices. It can also be ordered directly from the Bulletin Room, UK Experiment Station Building, Lexington, Ky. 40506.
March is a good time to move or transplant shrubs. Do this just as soon as the ground thaws out or can be easily worked. If transplanting budded stock, see that the buds are several inches underground. This will prevent suckers from springing up from the footer plants.
March provides about the last opportunity until next fall to transplant grapes, evergreen, dormant roses, and sodas easily, and with the best chance of success.

Extended area phone service

The candidate said that the next step is to set up a citizen's telephone committee in each of the counties. Ward said he would work with the local committees and would make the resources of his office available to expedite the work of the committees. Ward headed similar committees representing Woodford and Jessamine counties beginning in 1968. Extended area service will be provided between exchanges served by different telephone companies.
The work of these committees resulted in a speeded up plan for extended area service for Woodford-Fayette and Jessamine-Fayette which was inaugurated Dec. 26, 1972. The increased telephone rates in Woodford and Jessamine are less than a dollar for residential subscribers and some $6.00 per month for business subscribers. This is resulting in a savings of tens of thousands of dollars to the residents of these counties, Ward pointed out.
Ward promised fairness and reasonableness to the telephone companies and said that this drive would be conducted in a positive and constructive manner. He said those interested in serving on a telephone committee, reporting problems or making suggestions to the committee should contact him at P. O. 560, Versailles, 4038, telephone 606-473-2121 (will accept collect calls).
