

New hatchery should improve Kentucky fishing

By Jeanie Beckett, State News Bureau

Game fishing in Kentucky should be more fruitful in the not too distant future as fish from the Minor E. Clark Hatchery are stocked in lakes and streams.

Muskie, Walleye, Rockfish (striped bass) and Largemouth bass will be produced at the mile-long complex which covers 300 acres.

Full use of the complex will depend upon completion of nearby Cave Run Reservoir which will provide 13 million gallons of water per day for the hatchery operation. In order to avoid delay in engineering work on the hatchery, the state Department of Fish and Wildlife is pumping water from the Licking River to operate the hatchery at half strength through 1973.

The current hatchery population consists of 420-year-old Rockfish, 1000 Walleye and 50 rock muskie. It will be two years before eggs can be taken from the Rockfish. In the meantime, Rockfish fry (recently hatched fish) will be secured from North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia for rearing to the 2-inch size for stocking.

The Largemouth bass are ready to spawn this year. Walleye stock will grow to brood fish size in three years, but the federal

Division of Fish and Wildlife has agreed to supply 4 million Walleye fry for Kentucky stocking in 1973.

Now ranging from six to 18 pounds, the 50 Muskie will be capable of spawning next year, but facilities will not be adequate at that time to take eggs artificially.

"With eventual production of the Muskie, we hope to have in the present 120 hours of fishing needed to bag one of these beauties, but it will still remain a trophy fish," said Charles C. Bowers Jr., director of Fisheries.

Staff members at the new hatchery are Dan Brewer, superintendent; Mike Hearn, biologist; John Donahue and Paul Glover, maintenance personnel; Robert Douglas, who served as manager at the Guffitt for several years, also will join the staff.

The new hatchery is located on the Licking River, 12 miles from Morehead. It has been built at a cost of $2.3 million, with only $130,000 coming from federal funds. Kentucky's share came from fishing license fees and taxes on fishing equipment.

Although the full impact, in the form of "catches," may not be felt for several years, fishermen can take satisfaction in the knowledge that the new hatchery is in operation and more exciting fishing is around the corner.
