Gospel Lads at Christian Church Apr. 2

A one-hour tv special called "Pass It On" was recently produced by Revival Fires of Joplin, Mo., and is scheduled for release nationwide at prime television time on at least 200 stations April 1-8.

The Gospel Lads, who are featured on the program, will appear for a personal appearance at the Carlisle Christian Church on Monday, April 2, at 7:30 p.m. The public is cordially invited to attend.

The program features such well-known personalities as singer Anita Bryant, Governor Ronald Reagan, astronaut James Irwin, athlete Mike Sensibaugh, and author of the "Living Bible" Dr. Kenneth Taylor. Each of the special guests is interviewed on location by Cecil Todd, Director of the Revival Fires ministries. The guests tell how they are passing on their faith in their respective vocations. The telecast concludes with the taping of a live service in Los Angeles' Channel 11 studios that features the Good Twins singing "Pass It On" and the Gospel Lads - "Redemption Draweth Nigh." Also included on the special will be Revival Fires' regulars Russ Martin and Bob Daniels. Cecil Todd presents a message on the program theme that relates the story of Philip sharing his faith with the Eunuch, as recorded in Acts 8:29-39. As the story is told, it is beautifully dramatized on the screen, including the moving scene of the Eunuch's baptism into Christ.

The special was produced by the Coyle Advertising Agency of West Covina, Calif. Larry Coyle, Don Baccola and Will Lane were the Directors.

The program is dedicated to help call our continent to Christ and offers Dr. Taylor's "Living New Testament" (renamed "From God With Love") to all who request it. This edition has specially marked scriptures and an outlined plan for use by personal workers called "Seven Steps to the Foot of the Cross" that will encourage Christians to pass on their faith.

Pap smear clinic 4:30 to 8 p.m.

A Pap Smear Clinic for the detection of cervical cancer will be conducted at the Nicholas County Health Center by Dr. Allen Hamon on Thursday, March 29, 4:30 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Cervical cancer, the second leading cause of cancer deaths in women, is potentially curable if caught early enough. Since 1966, the cervical cancer screening program of the State Department of Health has been helping county health departments establish cervical cancer screening programs in order to find those afflicted women early enough to cure them. The program emphasizes teaching women the importance of having a yearly Pap smear, the simple, painless test for cervical cancer developed by and named for George Papanicolaou, M.D.

So far, 85% of the reported cervical cancer cases found by the county health departments have been in the early, potentially curable stages of development, according to Carolyn Smith of the State Department of Health's Cancer Program. Miss Smith noted that due to early detection and prompt treatment, deaths from cervical cancer have been cut nationally 50% in the last 25 years.

Draft Board records moved to Lexington

The Nicholas County "Draft" Board's records have been moved to the Selective Service Area Office, Jordan Building, 1220 South Broadway, Lexington, Colonel Taylor L. Davidson, State Director, announced. The pre-announced target date of June 30, 1973, for an all-volunteer armed forces will ultimately reduce the number of "draft" locations in the state from 120 to fewer than 21 area offices, according to the Kentucky State Director.

The State Director said, "Under the area concept, a local board with uncompensated members will continue to function in each county. Nicholas County "Draft" Board Members' duties will remain the same, mostly that of classifying registrants. Voluntary registrars will be appointed and their names with locations where registration in Carlisle can be accomplished will be posted in government buildings and schools.

"Normally, registration can be accomplished within the home county, although the law does provide that a young man may register away from his home for convenience. He must register at the age of 18 (anytime during the period of 30 days before or after his 18th birthday). Failure to register can result in prosecution in federal court. Penalties of fine and imprisonment are provided for those convicted.

"Even with the closing of the Carlisle office, everything will go on as in the past. Any Nicholas County "draft" registrant between the ages of 18 and 26 desiring specific information from his file must obtain same from the area office in Lexington. This office is open Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. through 4:30 p.m."

According to the State Director, any registrant can obtain general information by calling toll free 800-372-2963.

"In the phasing down of the "draft" to a projected standby, we are grateful that Charles E. Wilson, chairman, Emerson D. Baker, James C. Gill, Henry C. Peters and John R. Anderson have consented to continue as board members. Their 15

The Nicholas County Health Department announced today that a kidney disease screening program will begin Monday, April 2 in the Nicholas County Elementary School and the Carlisle Kindergarten. The detection program is designed to test Head Start, Kindergarten, and first grade children for infection of the urinary tract that could cause damage to the kidneys if not discovered and treated.

The State Department of Health has released statistics that indicate there are an estimated 54,000 Kentuckians who have urinary tract infections and are unaware of it.

Finding these cases early and getting them under the care of physicians is the goal of this screening program.

The local health department strongly urges all parents to allow their children to participate in the screening program by signing the parent consent cards which the children will be bringing home from school.

'Tracer' used to catch young caller

A "tracer" being used by South Central Bell has resulted in the ferreting out of a 16-year-old boy as the person who has been making harrassing calls to a North Middletown woman.

The boy was apprehended by local authorities and brought before Judge J.M. Leer in juvenile court, where he was placed on a year's probation on a charge of making obscene and nuisance calls.

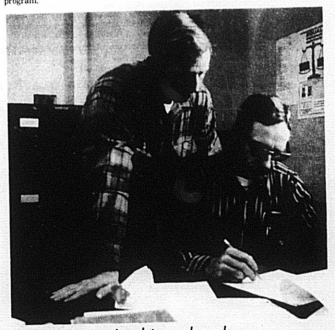
The boy readily admitted the calls and in testimony a record of the calls kept by the one woman listed 24 calls in one day alone—and that part of the time the receiver had been left off the hook.

Charles A. Harris, South Central Bell manager here, said increased use of the "tracer" is being launched by telephone companies everywhere to hunt down the persons making the nuisance calls.

Harris said this was actually the youth's second offense, the youth having been picked up four years ago on a similar charge when he was only 12.

"Our customers are irritated by such calls," Harris said, "so the telephone companies are moving in. We have the facilities to hunt down the callers and we feel we can't tolerate it any longer."

He said the company is also cracking down on fradulent billing—cases in which persons have billed calls to other telephone numbers. "We have made a number of convictions in such cases in our company and others are pending," he said.



Looking ahead

Fred Whaley, treasurer, and Edgar Allen Darrell, chairman, prepare the 1973-74 budget for the Nicholas County Conservation District. The District submits the budget, along with a proposed program of work for the year, to the Division of Soil and Water Conservation, Frankfort, Ky. by April 1. This complies with a requirement for eligibility for direct aid to the District. The Nicholas County Fiscal Court supplements the District's funds. The monies are used for clerical assistance, office operation, education and promotion, and various projects undertaken by the District to promote conservation of our total natural resources.

Bicentennial guideline released

A guideline for statewide, regional and local participation in Kentucky's rapidly approaching Bicentennial Celebration is being distributed to local communities under the auspices of the Kentucky Historical Events Celebration Commission. "Kentucky's '74-'76 Celebrations", according to Clyde M. Webb, Commission Chairman, is designed to stimulate additional ideas for local events and projects that can be incorporated into overall bicentennial celebration activities.

Webb feels that grass roots participation is vital to the success of the two-year-long celebration. "We have a unique opportunity," Webb said, "to tell the world about Kentucky's past and her promise. During the Bicentennial, we'll play host to thousands of visitors. Let's show Kentucky off at her beautiful best and undertake projects that will provide lasting benefits for Kentuckians, too. Let's aim for 200 special projects and celebrations to take place throughout the state during the celebration and show the world that when Kentucky throws a birthday part, it's worth coming to."

It is suggested that bicentennial programs utilize existing attractions and resources rather than develop artificial exposition-type attractions. Celebrations should be oriented toward the entire family offering a wide diversity of activities to appeal to all ages; projects should be varied enough to interest all segments of the population, both within and without the state.

Any community wishing to participate in the bicentennial celebration is urged to send its suggestions to its Matching Funds Region Chairman. He will submit it to the Commission where a Regional Director who can provide guidance and assistance to the community will be assigned to the project.

Some of the bicentennial activities already being planned include: recognition for the 100th running of the Kentucky Derby, commemoration of the founding of Fort Harrod, tentative plans for the construction of a living fort at Boonesboro and a festival commemorating the last battle of the American Revolution fought at Blue Licks Battlefield (six miles north of Carlisle).

The American Revolution Bicentennial Commission themes . . . Heritage '76, Festival USA and Horizon '76 are being included in Kentucky's bicentennial program. The basic program areas covered by the themes are: historical programs; pageantry and historic re-enactments; historical education projects; restorations of historical sites and buildings; and marking of historic sites, routes and trails; arts and cultural exhibits; fairs and expositions; international activities; museum exhibits; state and city goals programs; environmental programs; beautification projects and improvements in public and private transportation.
