Frank Terrell in sod planted corn field.

Good conservation practice used by Frank Terrell

by Willmer Halcomb

Frank Terrell, of the Miller Station Road, used a good conservation practice this year. Mr. Terrell planted all his corn by the sod planting method. He planted his corn without any seed bed preparation. He used chemical sprays for weed control. Mr. Terrell estimated that his corn would produce between 150 and 200 bushel per acre. He said he would be able to tell the exact amount after he finished picking the crop.

He planted 24,000 plants to the acre and hoped that he would get 20,000 to 22,000 plants per acre to grow. He said he fertilized heavy enough to get high yields. If he had known he said he would have added more fertilizer this year, for we had plenty of moisture to go with the fertilizer. Moisture can be a limiting factor in corn production but he said one must fertilize and get plenty of corn on the land.

Mr. Terrell applied 150 lbs. of nitrogen, 46 lbs. phosphate and 130 lbs. potash per acre. He planted his corn on the contour. There was no visible sign of erosion in his corn field, but he pointed out that where he had grown his tobacco on the same kind of land that he had erosion and would have to build a diversion channel to divert the water off the tobacco land.

He uses a field for corn two years and then seeds it to hay or pasture.

Mr. Terrell has a field of milo or grain sorghum that he estimates will produce 100 bushel or more per acre. He thinks the milo will be equivalent to about a 100 bushel corn crop per acre in feed value.

Mr. Terrell feeds all his crops on the farm. He has a 25-sow hog operation. He feeds all his pigs out to market size. He also has a beef cattle operation.

Mr. Terrell has been a cooperator through his local conservation district since 1957.

Many other farmers in Nicholas county have sod planted corn this year. They all report good yields. All the Supervisors of the Nicholas County Conservation District contacted on sod planting reported that their corn would produce 150 bushels per acre or more this year.

SUCCESS in MARRIAGE

by Professor J. KENNETH WILLIAMS

FATHER-IN-LAW PROBLEMS

DEAR PROFESSOR WILLIAMS: My husband's father is in his 70s and has recently moved in with us. He doesn't bathe regularly, argues with me, and, although he loves the children, interferes with our discipline of them. Can you make any suggestions?—L.O., St. Paul, Minn.

PROFESSOR WILLIAMS: If you feel the situation is becoming intolerable, talk it over with your husband if you haven't already. He's your husband's father and it's really his place to attempt to work out a practical solution. It's not likely the situation will improve unless the air is cleared.

Tell your husband exactly what his father is doing which you object to. Make any suggestions you feel necessary, then let him handle the situation. One suggestion is to make the father-in-law's living facilities more private by giving him a private entrance if possible, a television set, radio, books, and encourage him to become active thus keeping him busy.

He shouldn't be deprived of seeing or playing with the children or even having access to the rest of your home. However, definite guidelines should be set, now, before the problem becomes unmanageable.

MARRYING TO REFORM

DEAR PROFESSOR WILLIAMS: I am engaged to a man who drinks excessively. I'm from a background which doesn't tolerate any kind of alcoholic beverages. However, I feel that I can change him after we get married. What do you think?—S.L., Chicago

PROFESSOR WILLIAMS: Evidence indicates that marrying someone with the hopes of reforming whether it be drinking, promiscuity, drugs or whatever doesn't always succeed. If he doesn't stop drinking now when he knows how you feel about it, it's doubtful that he'll change too much after marriage.

When two people are in love, they tend to make every effort not to offend each other. In fact, the idea is to please each other as much as possible. However, in your case, your fiance is making no effort to stop drinking even though he must know how you feel.

I suggest not rushing into marriage yet. If drinking is something you feel you can't tolerate, marrying someone like your fiance can give you untold problems. Date him longer; if he changes, fine. If he doesn't, seriously reconsider the entire relationship. Maybe he isn't the right person for you.

WHAT TO DO IN OCTOBER

October is the month when barn lofts should be full of hay, cribs full of corn, crocks full of kraut and pickles, bins full of fuel, and cellars full of apples, squash, pumpkins, and potatoes. There should also be pantries full of jars of fruits and vegetables, because this is the month when days start growing cold, when all animate life starts moving indoors, and the supply of fresh foods from the field and garden diminishes toward its lowest ebb.

But there are things yet to be done. October is a time of falling leaves and, if they fall on the lawn, they must be raked up and moved away. If not, the grass they cover may smother out during the winter. Leaves are a good source of organic matter. They can be spread on the vegetable garden to be turned under next spring, or used to start a compost pile.

During the month, it will also be a good idea to rake up and burn the dead stalks and stems of perennials, says Benny Tjia, Extension horticulturist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. This will help control insects and disease. Too, if possible, destroy all weeds that have or are going to seed. This may save some weed trouble next spring.

Also toward the end of the month, drain the sprinkling system and take the hose indoors and store away. Mow the lawn as long as new growth continues to be apparent. This will keep the turf looking neat and improve its condition for next year. Long matted grass that has lain on the lawn all winter causes trouble when spring mowing begins.

October is a good month in which to set out fruit, as well as other varieties of shrubs and shade trees. Transplants in the fall usually do better than those set out in the spring, and usually there is more time in which to do the job. However, the planting of such trees and shrubs as Rose of Sharon, Magnolia, Tulip, Birch, Dogwood, Crape Myrtle, and a few others that have large fleshly roots should be delayed until spring, Tjia notes.

Since October with all its autumn colors and crisp weather is one of the most beautiful and invigorating months of the year, all its wonderful days should not be spent doing fall chores. During the cool nights, waters of the ponds and rivers start losing some of their stored-up summer warmth, causing fish to arouse from their lethargy and start hitting flies and plugs again. Those who can should forget chores for a few hours and go fishing.

Then October is a month of the ripening of wild fruits and nuts. There are hickorynuts, walnuts, beechnuts, and hazlenuts in the back pasture. There are wild grapes and haws in the thickets and persimmons and pawpaws along old fencerows. Going "nutting" or "fruiting" can be a most pleasurable, healthful, and profitable experience and should not be neglected. As one should never let his business interfere with his fishing, countryfolk should never let uncertain farm and garden chores prevent them from going out and gathering in a few bushels of walnuts to crack and eat during the snows of December or enough fragrant wild grapes for a jar or two of tangy jelly at Thanksgiving.

The thing to do in October is to complete the most pressing and necessary tasks and then, by all means take some time off to enjoy the season. Those who do will find life more worth living and may also live longer in the bargain.

Author Donleavy lecture tonight at Morehead

Irish-American author J.P. Donleavy is appearing Thursday, Oct. 25, at Morehead State University.

The lecture is free to the public and high school English students in Eastern and Central Kentucky have been invited.

Donleavy's visit is part of his first American tour and is co-sponsored by the MSU Concert and Lecture Series and the Division of Languages and Literature.

Compared in style with James Joyce, the novelist is a native of New York City but has lived and worked in Ireland for several years. His works include "The Ginger Man," "A Singular Man," "The Onion Eaters" and "A Fairy Tale of New York," which was released last month.

Donleavy's appearance is the first event of the 1973-74 Concert and Lecture Series.

Seniors may apply now for 1974 fall UK semester

Kentucky high school seniors who plan to attend the University of Kentucky beginning the 1974 fall semester may now apply for admission, housing, and financial aid automatically when they take the American College Test.

Dr. Elbert Ockerman, Dean of Admissions at UK, said Kentucky high school seniors who check the University as their first choice when they take the ACT will no longer be required to fill out a formal application. "Students who check UK as their second or third choice may still apply for admission by filling out the regular admission form."

All students seeking admission to the University of Kentucky and all other state institutions are required to take the ACT. Kentucky high school seniors who plan to take the national test on Oct. 20, 1973, may take advantage of the automatic enrollment procedure, referred to as Enter-Act, by checking UK as their first choice.

The next testing date for the ACT is Dec. 8, 1973, with registration running through Nov. 12, 1973. The ACT also will be given on Feb. 23, 1974, with registration from Nov. 5, 1973, to Jan. 28, 1974, and on Apr. 27, 1974, with registration from Jan. 21 to Apr. 1.

The automatic admissions process also applies for housing and financial aid. "Students who check a need for housing or financial aid on their ACT form should receive a response from these particular offices much earlier than before," Dr. Ockerman said. "If a student needs financial aid for the fall of 1974, he should take the ACT no later than Dec. 8, 1973."

A coordinated Entrance Decision (COED) now assures all entering freshmen that by filling out one application and marking the services needed they will automatically receive information from housing, financial aid, admissions, and the Advising Conference. Health information will be requested at a later date from the Health Service.

Construction begins on new state park

Kentucky's extensive network of state parks is scheduled to receive another addition in late July, 1974. Construction has begun on E.P. "Tom" Sawyer State Park on Robert Struck and Sons of Louisville.

The firm submitted a low bid of $1,455,000 for the Jefferson county project, comprising about 319 acres, adjacent to Central State Hospital, according to Donald Penegor, director of planning, Kentucky Department of Parks.

The main attraction at "Tom" Sawyer State Park will be a complex containing an outdoor Olympic-size swimming pool with a diving well of three boards, a wading pool and observation deck.

A large building will house restrooms and dressing rooms, as well as provide space for such events as family reunions and company picnics. A small raised berm located at the edge of the area can be used for local drama productions.

Penegor said that four tennis courts might be included in the complex. He estimated that 1,000 to 1,500 people can be accommodated daily during the summer season.

Vending machines will be provided and picnic tables scattered around the area can be used by those who choose to bring their own meals, he added.

The facility is named in honor of former Jefferson County Judge Ervin P. Sawyer, who was killed in an auto accident in 1969.

Breaks Record
