farmers with high quality needs in spite of chaotic markets and tight supply situation in some areas.

Mr. Trow pointed out that the energy crisis, which resulted in a disruption of the co-op's petroleum services to members, brought Southern States and other co-ops across the nation to form the International Energy Cooperative. The IEC has as its objective the development of farmers and ranchers and controlled sources of crude oil for co-op refineries.

The report on local operations and services rendered to farmer members was given by Fred Vaughn, manager of Carlisle Coop. He reported that total volume for the co-op for the past year was about $900,000.

There was also a special recognition for new "Farm Home" Advisory board members as well as those from these groups who were retiring.

Prizes were given and the following people won prizes: Mrs. Roy Carpenter—looter; Raymond House—iron; Chester Ockerman—(c o r d) plow; W. E. Estess—1000-boat-cables; Gary Barber—30 lb. dog food; W. E. Estess—ice cream freezer; Mrs. Andrew Gray—water heater; Mrs. Mable Crosswell—3 gal. gas can; Ernest Fryman—cream freezer; Allen Stone—free cooler; Beverly King—fire extinguisher; Arthur Downer—100-X spray; Mrs. Chester Ockerman—drill; Betty Avey—wind fan and James Pratt, was the portable which was chosen from the people who voted at the store prior to the meeting.

Senator Dee Huddleston

SENATOR FOR THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY

PRESENTER FORD AND THE ECONOMIC SUMMIT was asked by a reporter the other day if President Ford had brought a new atmosphere to Washington. I responded that the new President has been "like a breath of fresh air."

I know that Congress is receiving a great deal more attention and cooperation from the new President and I know that the new President will reciprocate, as we are doing on the President's request for reinstatement of the Code of Living Council.

This is not to say, of course, that members of Congress will never disagree with President Ford. But at least there will be honest differences of opinion in which both sides respect the other's point of view. Hopefully, the Congress and the President will accept each other as "normals."

On a more personal level, I have been quite pleased and gratified that the President has never proposed advanced by five first-term senators, including myself, that he call an economic summit meeting to deal with inflation. The summit is now scheduled to convene after Labor Day, and I am sure that I join all Americans in hopeful anticipation that some concrete proposals for fighting the 11 and 12 percent inflation will emerge.

I think it is significant that just two days before he assumed the Presidency, Dan Vice President Ford took time to meet for about an hour with the five senators who had proposed the economic summit meeting. He told us then that he liked the idea and that he would lend his support.

True to his word, four days later in his address to a joint session of Congress, President Ford endorsed the proposal and said he would personally convene the summit conference and preside over it. Not only does this demonstrate a willingness to work with Congress, but it also demonstrates an urgency about our economic problems which has been lacking in the recent past.
