during project groups and serving as woodcraft leader for 10 members of the Green Valley 4-H Woodcraft Project club. She also became a school organizational leader for the 1973 7th grade 4-H club. Rachel assumed many officer and committee responsibilities during her eight years in 4-H.
The Kentucky group left early Saturday morning, Nov. 28, by chartered bus and returned home Friday, Dec. 6. It had sessions, seminars, and non-assemblies during the week gave delegates a chance to discuss ways they can "make things happen through 4-H" in their communities and in society.

Other highlights of the week included special evenings at a "pop concert," and the Chicago Art Institute, hours of the Museum of Science and Industry, the Museum of Natural History, and other points of interest in Chicago; and the National 4-H Dress House, where state 4-H dress revue winners modeled their champion outfits.

Special breakfasts, luncheons and banquets were planned throughout the week for the 4-H'ers, and nationally-known entertainers were featured on many of these programs. At these sessions, too, the 4-H'ers had the opportunity to meet representatives of the business organizations and foundations which sponsored their trips to Chicago and the 4-H Congress events.

Also meeting with the Congress delegates were national leaders in industry, education, agriculture, and communications as well as 4-H representatives from Canada and several other countries.

Other 4-H champions attending from the Blue Grass Area were: George Bode, Madison-Fredonia Power; Debbie Hayes, Madison-Citizenship; Gerry Huel, Scott-Citizenship; Karen Hurst, Bourbon-Recreation; Margaret Layton, Bourbon-Bread; Jeanie Sharp, Scott-Bread; David Thorsen, Scott-Babbit.

Accompanying the 4-H'ers in Chicago were Richard Crafton, Route 1,
