Bluegrass Area District to assist in fuel allocation

Damon W. Harrison, chairman of the Kentucky Energy Council, announced that as of Feb. 1, the Bluegrass Area Development District will be designated the Energy Information Center for the 17 county area it serves in Central Kentucky.

All 17 of Kentucky's Area Development District (ADDs) which are multi-county planning and development agencies have been given this designation and according to Harrison, "will provide locations across the state where Kentuckians can find out about energy programs and obtain assistance in making requests for allocation. We believe that this will not only be most convenient but will speed up the processing of applications for assistance."

The Bluegrass ADD includes Anderson, Bourbon, Boyle, Clark, Estill, Fayette, Franklin, Garrard, Harrison, Jessamine, Lincoln, Madison, Mercer, Nicholas, Powell, Scott and Woodford counties. "Fuel consumers having difficulty obtaining adequate supplies should first contact their distributors," Harrison said. "The federal regulations clearly state that distributors must accept new customers."

If this does not solve the problem, contact James Seibson, Executive Director, Bluegrass Area Development District, 180 East Reynolds Road, Lexington, Ky. 40501.

The ADDs with their new energy information responsibilities will provide information to applicants about the allocation program for middle distillates, residual fuel oil, propane and motor gasoline;

—assist qualified applicants to complete the necessary applications for either permanent allocations or temporary allocations to meet emergencies and hardships;

—assist applicants to locate a supplier when appropriate;

—verify the validity of requests for a fuel allocation as requested by the Kentucky Mandatory Allocation Office (KMAO); and —assist in implementing federal programs required by law and by the KMAO.

The Kentucky Mandatory Allocation Office, which has been responsible for the allocation of middle distillate fuels (heating oil, diesel fuel and kerosene) since Nov. 1, 1973, will continue to meet emergency hardship needs for:

—middle distillates—four percent of fuel allocated for Kentucky is available for these emergency needs;

—propane—three percent of fuel allocated to Kentucky is "set-aside" for emergency hardships;

—residual fuel oil—one and one-half percent is "set-aside";

—motor gasoline—three percent is "set aside."

The KMAO will also be responsible for the final processing of the applications and the final allocation of fuel after the Energy Information Centers have met their responsibilities.

Harrison said, "This network of Energy Information Centers will add real strength to the Kentucky allocation program. The Area Development Districts have the expertise and the local knowledge to make another real contribution to Kentucky during the energy crisis."

Insulation is one of the savest places!

Your best chance to save energy and money is through improved insulation.

Insulation keeps your home warmer in winter and cooler in summer. So insulation cuts down on the amount of energy used, the cost of heating and cooling, and probably the cost of repairs since your equipment doesn't have to work as hard or as long.

When you put your money in insulation, you are investing... not spending!

Electricity is too good to waste!
