

Protect our privacy

A bipartisan bill was introduced in the House of Representatives recently to protect an individual's privacy from the hands of governmental agencies and private organizations now building files on U.S. citizens.

Government agencies can find out immediately whether a person has ever been convicted of a traffic violation or any other records with the law. The amount of information the government now has on each of its citizens is so large, enormous.

Did we learn anything?

America is just now coming out of a severe gasoline shortage. The lines at the service stations have disappeared. The restrictions on the hours the stations will sell gas have been lifted, and you can get your gas to go about anywhere you want to in the United States.

Saving time on a national basis, which didn't have enough fuel to help any, and set the speed limit at 55 miles per hour. Cutting back the speed limit caused some gas companies to raise the price, and some gas and it did save lives and cut down on accidents.

FRANKFORT.—The 1974 legislative session has been going on for a month, but legislators left a tremendous job for the remainder of the year to complete, a spokesman for the Legislative Research Commission said.

And the LRC is the one that will be most responsible for the work. The immediate job is publication of the act passed by the 1974 legislature. Law requires that bills be published no later than 90 days after the session ends.

At the same time the American people were struggling with the oil shortage and they were looking for change. To meet this problem they changed their eating habits ago began to raise their own meat.

First the good news. The Miss Universe contest finally has some competition. Kellee Evans, who calls herself Miss Nettle Universe, has the credentials (42-28-34) to provide pretty fair competition.

There are now 10 different seed corn varieties in the market. The one that is the most popular is the one that is the most popular.
