What to do in May

by Nevyle Shackelford
UK College of Agriculture

Hail, bounteous, beautiful May. The cold and rigors of winter have gone. The unpleasant heat of summer has not yet begun. The vegetation is at the height of luxuriance. The time of the May Queen is at hand and Maia, the goddess of spring, rules supreme over our land.

Such is this wonderful fifth month of the year—the month of gardening when, according to UK vegetable specialist C.R. Roberts, it is time to make a first planting of all warm-weather crops.

It is time, says Roberts, to plant beans, sweet corn, okra, squash, cucumbers, and watermelons. It is time to transplant tomatoes, peppers, and eggplant; to mulch plants with straw; and to check cabbage, broccoli, and cauliflower for worms. If worms are found, hand-pick and destroy or spray or dust with Sevin. Also when cucumbers, muskmelons, and watermelons start coming through the soil, dust with Sevin to discourage cucumber beetles and other insects that love to feed on these tender young plants.

In making transplants, remember that everything from tomato seedlings to young trees must have their roots protected against drying out while out of the ground. Unless this is done, these highly sensitive and vital parts may be severely injured, if not killed. If possible, transplant in late afternoon or on cloudy days. Then to give transplants a better start, water with about a pint of starter solution which can be made by dissolving three tablespoons of 10-52-17 or 10-52-8 fertilizer to one gallon of water.

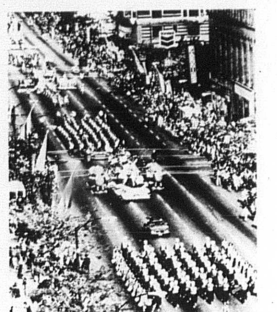
May is the month to keep a close watch for plant lice, flea beetles, potato beetles, and other pests that are sure to make their appearance even in the best of gardens. Be prepared to fight these destructive insects with a good sprayer or duster and supplies of Sevin, malathion, or other insecticides recommended by your local county Extension agent.

Aside from controlling insects in the garden, May is a good month to thwart the designs of bagworms on the shrubbery. Bagworm eggs hatch out during this month and the larvae begin feeding. It is at this stage that a spray of Sevin or malathion is most effective in reducing this insect's numbers.

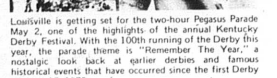
Other jobs well worth doing outside the vegetable garden include the preparation of containers for the highly decorative and hummingbird-attracting begonias and geraniums. Also start planting gladiolus bulbs about mid-May and then in order to have a longer planting period, plant at weekly

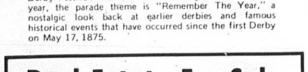
UK scientist wants ticks

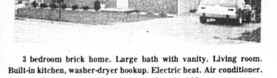
To people who don't want them, ticks seem to show up everywhere. But when you want them for study, as does a University of Kentucky scientist, they are not plentiful enough. Dr. Fred Knapp, a veterinary entomologist with the UK College of Agriculture, is interested in obtaining live ticks for his studies concerning control of these woodland pests. He is also interested in learning more about the kinds of ticks found in Kentucky and their distribution. If you are interested in sharing your wealth of ticks, Dr. Knapp will be happy to have them. He prefers live ticks, but dead ones for distribution records are also welcome. Dr. Knapp can be contacted through the Department of Entomology at the University of Kentucky in Lexington.

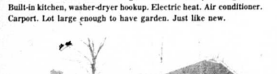


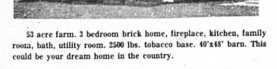
Louisville is getting set for the two-hour Pegasus Parade May 2, one of the highlights of the annual Kentucky Derby Festival. With the 100th running of the Derby this year, the parade theme is "Remember The Year," a nostalgic look back at earlier derbies and famous historical events that have occurred since the first Derby on May 17, 1875.

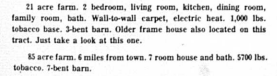


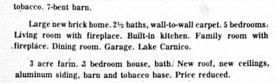


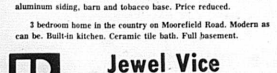












Senator Dee Huddleston

REPORTS TO THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY

RETIREMENT INCOME TAX CREDIT

Many retired state and municipal employes, who do not receive Social Security, are currently discriminated against because Social Security is not subject to taxation while they receive only a tax credit against a portion of their retirement income.

These retired state, municipal and other non-Social Security retirees receive a 15 percent tax credit on the first $1,524 income for single persons and $2,286 for elderly couples. This retirement income tax credit has not been updated since 1962 for single elderly persons and 1964 for aged couples.

I will be supporting legislation which should come before the Senate soon to increase the base amount against which the 15 percent credit is applied to $2,500 for single aged persons and $3,750 for aged couples. Such an increase is essential to provide tax justice to many millions of Americans.

I am hopeful that the Federal government will soon reinstate programs providing assistance for debris clearance and repair of farm fencing destroyed by tornados earlier this month.

On March 12, 1974, the Department of Agriculture issued an administrative order eliminating farm fencing from the national list of materials eligible for cost-sharing assistance and severely restricted debris clearance under the Emergency Conservation Program of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service.

I have been working with the Senate Agriculture Committee, the Public Works Subcommittee on Disaster Relief, and the Department of Agriculture in an attempt to get that decision changed.

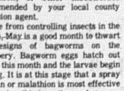
Many Kentuckians have expressed their opposition to year-round Daylight Saving Time (DST). I have opposed it since its enactment in December on the ground that there is no proof that Daylight Saving Time will save energy. Public opinion polls indicate that a growing number of American people share that view.

The Department of Transportation has asked its consumer affairs office to poll the public on the issue. If you would like to voice your opinion to the federal agency handling the matter, write to: U.S. Department of Transportation, Box 1813, Washington, D.C. 20013



BUTLER LOOKS AT Agriculture

Kentucky Lamb Producers will again have the opportunity of participating in shows and sales this year.

The Kentucky Department of Agriculture has sponsored lamb shows and sales for the past several years in cooperation with local stockyards and agri-business firms. This year the first show will be the East Kentucky Lamb Show and Sale at Flemingsburg to be held on Saturday, May 11. It will be held at the Farmers Stockyards with exhibitors to have their lambs at the stockyards by 9:30 a.m. The show will start at 10:30 a.m. followed by the sale at 1:00 p.m.

The annual Central Kentucky Lamb Show and Sale will be held on Wednesday, May 29, at the Paris Stockyards. This show has been held in Lexington in previous years. Lambs will be received at this show from 8:00 to 9:00 a.m. with the show to begin at 10:00 a.m. followed by the sale at 1:00 p.m.

The Kentucky Department of Agriculture offers $1,000 in premiums for each of these shows. Although the number of sheep and lambs on Kentucky farms continues to decline, we still have a number of outstanding flocks in Kentucky. In years past, sheep represented a major economic force in our agricultural economy, particularly in Central Kentucky.

Problems with dogs and diseases have led to the decline in sheep numbers as has the trend toward greater production of other types of livestock. This is unfortunate because sheep production has been generally profitable through the years and can be operated in conjunction with beef cattle.

Perhaps gains can be made in our sheep industry through promotional activities such as the shows and sales and some of the activities planned by the Kentucky Sheep and Wool Producers.

It might add that each of the lamb shows and sales will offer classes for both youth and adult exhibitors. Any producer who is not familiar with these shows and sales can contact the Department of Agriculture's Division of Shows and Fairs office in the Plaza Tower, Frankfort. Several county agents and vo-ag teachers have been supplied with information on the shows and sales.

WKU's short term to start May 20

"Invertebrate Heaven." That's how one Western faculty member has described the University's three-week May Term, which is scheduled to begin its third year of offering a period of concentrated study Monday, May 20. The May Term runs through June 2.

Dr. Rudolph Prins, associate professor of biology, is busy these days getting his students and gear ready for the waters off Key Largo, Fla. They will study a wide variety of marine invertebrates as part of Biology 475.

The May Term is especially rewarding for students and faculty such as Dr. Prins and his biologists, and also Dr. George Kinnear, an assistant professor of physical education and recreation at Western.

Dr. Kinnear and his students in Recreation 456 will participate in "Principles and Practices of Outdoor Recreation" for 12 days at Brandon Springs Group Camp at the Land-Between-the-Lakes.

All May Term classes perhaps don't offer the uniqueness of a field trip to Florida or to the lake, but the May Term promises a variety of courses for the student who wants to concentrate study into the three-week period.

Gov. Ford urges Senate to move to grant tax relief

Gov. Wendell H. Ford has followed up on action taken at the National Democratic Governors' Conference Monday by urging members of the U.S. Senate to move immediately on a plan to grant tax relief.

Ford, chairman of the caucus, proposed to the governors meeting in Chicago that they support his resolution calling for tax credits, or exemptions, to those in low, middle and fixed income brackets. His resolution was unanimously adopted with concurrence that he transmit it to the Senate.

In letters to Democratic Senators, the Governor said, "Attention to those already carrying an unfair tax burden is imperative." He called for tax relief similar to a plan suggested by Senators Walter Mondale and Edward Kennedy which has also received the backing of Senators Hubert Humphrey and Mike Mansfield.

Noting that the Nixon administration has publicly opposed tax relief, Ford said he hoped Senate action would result in swift support from both sides of the aisle.

"I especially hope Kentucky's U.S. Senators, Dee Huddleston and Marlow Cook, will endorse and vote for this program because of the benefits it can bring to hundreds of thousands of Kentuckians," Ford said.

At the conference last weekend, Ford told his colleagues that he had previously quizzed Herbert Stein, the President's chief economic advisor, on possibilities for tax relief, and "was flatly turned down."

"As a matter of fact, Mr. Stein considered the proposal one of very low priority," Ford added.

"We have the highest inflation rate since 1951 and economic growth has fallen in America by the largest margin in 16 years," the Governor said. "Tax reform, relief through exemptions or credits, and closing loopholes will correct a situation which continues to imperil our very sick economy."

Ford recalled that he was ridiculed by members of the opposing party when he fought for removal of the sales tax on grocery food. "They said this would be irresponsible and reckless, but time and experience have proven the removal was proper and Kentucky's improved economic status reflects this action," Ford said.

The Governor believes an infusion of several billion dollars into the economy through relief by tax credit or exemption should be achieved for those primarily in the income brackets mentioned. As part of the total program to get back on a stable economy he has favored closing tax loopholes in high income brackets and Congressional action to eliminate certain materials shortages which creates inflation.

"The system needs a major overhaul, but this is a first positive step and we encourage the Senate's immediate attention," Ford said.

Ford mailed copies of his resolution and a letter advocating support from Democratic governors to the Senators. He plans a meeting in May with House and Senate majority leaders to discuss additional assistance governors can furnish in this program.

Programs for children to be discussed

FRANKFORT—All parents, day care staff, and others interested in programs for children are urged to attend a public forum sponsored by the Department for Human Resources' Bureau for Social Services. The topic of discussion will be "Proposed Changes in Current Standards and Regulations."

The forum will be held May 7; 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room (basement) of the First National Bank Building at Georgetown. The room will be open and staff will be present at 7:00 p.m., for those who have not had a chance to review the standards and regulations in advance.

Day care has grown in increasing numbers as women with young children have entered the work force. The number of licensed facilities in the state has more than doubled in the past four years. As services have expanded, the need for different types of services has grown to include infant care, school-age care, night time care, and transportation. The proposed additions cover these services. It is through licensing regulations that the quality of child care is assured. Citizens of Scott, Harrison, Bourbon, and Nicholas counties are invited to attend the Georgetown forum. In these counties, there are nine day care programs, caring for 154 children.

If you would like additional information or copies of the revised standards, you may contact: Miss Trish McCool, Day Care Representative for the Georgetown area, 710 High Street, Lexington, Ky. Phone: 606/253-2667.

Tips--'Do You Want a Summer Job?'

Looking for a summer job? You probably realize that with so many other students trying to find work, you're up against some pretty stiff competition. The Department of Labor has some job hunting tips for you in its new booklet Do You Want a Summer Job?

The six-page pamphlet offers information on where to look for a job, how to prepare for a job interview, and what kinds of jobs young people may hold. Copies of Do You Want a Summer Job? are available free from Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

According to the pamphlet, before you begin the job hunt you should take time to decide what you have to offer a prospective employer. Think about what you've learned, things you've done, and what kinds of things you can do. Maybe you haven't worked before and have no obvious job skills, but don't underestimate yourself. Are you good at sports or crafts? Do you like working with cars or machines? Do you work well with people? Perhaps you're at your best helping children. Think about how and where you can put your talents to work.

Then, talk with your counselor or a teacher at school about jobs in the area and how you might best apply your skills.

Once you've decided on the kind of work you're looking for, the pamphlet suggests that you:

—Tell everyone you know—relatives, friends, neighborhood businessmen—that you're looking for work; they may be able to provide some leads.

—Check with the local employment service office for a free listing of all sorts of jobs in the area.

—Check newspaper want ads, bulletin boards, and factory and store windows for help wanted signs.

One good possibility in summer is outdoor work. There are jobs at camps, resorts, parks, playgrounds, and amusement parks; plant nurseries, farms, and construction projects may be hiring. Find out.

Another possibility is to replace a regular employee who is on vacation. Ask at business offices, stores, factories, theaters, hotels, motels and hospitals. Also check with ice cream and soft drink companies; they usually hire extra help in summer.

Do You Want a Summer Job? (free) is just one of the publications made available through the Consumer Product Information Center of the General Services Administration. For a listing of more than 200 other free or low-cost Federal publications, get a copy of the Consumer Information Index. Published quarterly, the Index is available free from Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colo. 81009 and at Federal Information Centers located throughout the country.

MAGICWORD by JULIE QUART

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions — horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle then strike it off list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.
