Educational programs for handicapped children

Parents of handicapped children of school age (6-18) should register their children with local school officials now. At the recent Board meeting of the Kentucky Association for Retarded Children, Dr. Nancy Riffe, Government Affairs Chairman, reported it is the association's understanding that new laws and an additional appropriation mean that legally every school-age child, regardless of handicap, should be enrolled this September.

Under the administration of Governor Ford and Superintendent of Public Instruction, Dr. Lyman Ginger, provision for handicapped children in the public schools will be more than doubled. "But, unless parents get their children registered immediately, school districts will not be able to plan adequate programs in time for the opening of school," Dr. Riffe said.

She added that children for whom there was no provision in the past are now to be provided with a free public education. No matter how severe the handicap, mental or physical, every school-age child should be enrolled. Anyone desiring further information about enrolling a child should write the Kentucky Association for Retarded Children, Box 775, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or call (502) 564-6600.

Grand Jury in session two days

The Grand Jury for the May term of the Nicholas Circuit Court was in session two days and returned three indictments. No charges were referred to the Grand Jury for investigation.

The following observations and recommendations were made:

1. Floor under radiator in jury room needs repairing.
2. Bridge at east city limits of Carlisle in bad condition. The highway department and LAN Railroad should be notified to investigate and make necessary repairs or replacement.

The Grand Jury commended the fiscal court for repairing sidewalks and steps as recommended by the former grand juries.

The Grand Jury recommends that the hospital board of the Nicholas County Hospital establish visiting hours and enforce them. Mrs. Geneva Houndtree served as foreman.

U.S. grants to local area

Tax Foundation figures used

NEW YORK—How well has Nicholas county been making out, compared with communities in other parts of the country, in the amount of Federal funds received via grants-in-aid and revenue sharing?

Of the $42.8 billion that was distributed in the past fiscal year, how much went to the local area?

Based upon a state-by-state analysis made by the Tax Foundation, a non-profit research organization that watches over government taxation and spending, Nicholas county collected a relatively large share in the year.

are collected from local residents and assigned to the aid programs.

Nicholas county's share of these costs amounted to approximately $1,028,000 in the past year, the breakdown indicates. The state's contribution was $206,000,000, exclusive of the matching funds that had to be put up in connection with many of the grants.

Locally, as in most parts of the country, the grants and the costs did not balance out equally. There was no attempt to make them do so. The only consideration, in awarding them, is supposed to be a community's needs and requirements, measured against the needs of other communities.

The wild divergence is indicated by the fact that, for 22 of the states, the grants were something less than a bargain. They paid more toward the programs than they received in aid.

Indiana came out worst. It paid $1.38 for every $1 that was returned to it.

It received approximately $1,542,000 through the combination of revenue sharing and grants-in-aid, according to a breakdown of the Tax Foundation's figures.

The total amount allocated to the State of Kentucky as a whole came to $770,000,000. It reports, on the strength of data it obtained from the Treasury Department.

The grants were made to help the state and its communities with their expenditures for highways, education, urban renewal, public assistance, health care and the like.

Also considered in the study was the cost of these benefits to the communities. They are paid for out of Federal income and excise taxes that
