Carlisle's annual Christmas Parade will be held on Thursday evening, Dec. 5.

Health Dept. puts roadside dumpers under surveillance

The Nicholas County Health Department, along with county officials, have activated an all out campaign against litter bags and roadside dumpers. The problem of trash being deposited along road ways and creek beds has become a very serious, unsightly, pollution problem and further strong penalties are handed out to those persons violating the solid waste law, the problem can only worsen. Laws concerning solid waste violations provide penalties of up to $50 in fines and 30 days in jail.

Certain conditions have been set up in Nicholas county to be the look out for dumpers and it is requested that any individual witnesses such an act immediately notify the Nicholas County Sheriff or Health Department.

On stage; not quite! Firemen are shown in silhouette before the gutted stage of the gymnasium at Millersburg Military Institute. Monday afternoon about 11:45. According to Millersburg Fire Chief Kenneth Dampier, the blaze was confined to the east end of the building, while the remainder of the structure suffered considerable water and smoke damage. Damage was estimated at several thousand dollars. The fire departments from Nicholas County, Carlisle, Harrison County, Boone County and Paris responded to the alarm. The blaze apparently began in the stage area of the 12-year-old building. Other views of the building on pages two and four.—Mercury photo

'Radar pistol' detects speed limit violators

The City of Carlisle Police Department uses a "speedgun" or "radar pistol" to detect speed limit violators.

According to Chief Allen Earlywine, the speedgun is 100% accurate and is capable of detecting speeders as far as the eye can see. The City leased the speedgun about six months ago for about $50 per month. When paid for, the City will own the speedgun—which looks uncharacteristically like a sawed-off banana. It has a pistol grip, trigger and a barrel measuring six inches in diameter.

It can be used in a car, or on foot with a battery operated port-pack, said Earlywine.

Only recently acquired by state police (11 are in use now and another 20 have been ordered), the new hand-held radar speed clocking devices are being trained for allowing troopers a far greater flexibility when clocking hour and flashed onto a small screen at the back of the unit above the pistol grip.

At any time, the patrolman also can flick a switch to "lock in" the suspect vehicle's speed.

Radar speed-clocking devices have been used by the State Police since 1963, according to Capt. Frits Atwood, chief communications officer.

During that time, a number of radar units—each more modern and more flexible than the last—have been used. Two of the latest models used have been the hand-held "speedgun" and a VASCAR unit.

While the VASCAR is considered to be at least as sophisticated as the hand-held units, Capt. Atwood noted that it lacks the mobility of the "speedgun," is more costly (about $1,000 each), and requires 40 or more hours of specialized training to operate. A patrolman can learn to use the hand-held unit in just two hours.

suspect speeders that was possible with older units.

With the older units, a trooper could clock traffic only from a parked position on the right-hand side of the road. And even then, he was limited to clocking traffic moving in one direction.

None of these limitations applies to the speedgun because it can be aimed in any direction.

Also, the hand-held units can be used 24 hours per day. The old units had to be mounted permanently on a car, which meant that when a trooper ended his patrol shift, the unit went home with him.

The "speedgun" clocks the speed of a moving vehicle almost instantaneously. When aimed at a speeding car, and triggered, the unit sends out a radar beam which strikes the vehicle and bounces back to the unit. The time required for that beam to reach the vehicle and return is computed automatically by the unit into miles per

Engineering firm to prepare sewer study for Carlisle

Howard K. Bell Engineering firm of Lexington was hired by City Council Monday night to prepare a Self Planning Sewer System Study. According to engineer Bill Moore, the cost will be $30,000 to complete the study being required by the Environmental Protection Agency of the state and federal governments. $1,500 will be paid by the City and the remainder by federal grant.

The vote was 5-0, with Alex Crawford absent from the meeting because of illness. The study must be completed by January 1976. However, Moore stated that he would only prepare the application for the present until it is approved by the EPA Atlanta office.

Moore also submitted and explained a feasibility study for the extension of water and sewer services to Arnold Heights. Should the City decide to extend these services 80 residents of the area would gain the City services. However, Moore's estimated cost of $75,000 places the City on the border line of being able to extend services or not, he said. Moore stated that an FHA grant for $10,000 of the total would be a necessity. He also suggested that the 80 residents would gain the City services. No action was taken by City Council on this matter.

Moore granted Clarence Baugus, Sewer Plant Manager, for the efficiency with which he runs Carlisle's Sewer Plant.

He stated that for the capabilities the plant affords, it is one of the best run plants in the state. The new Sewer Plant permit has not yet been received by the City. But, Moore said that he is working on getting certain conditions omitted from the permit because they cannot possibly be met by the present facility.

In other business, —A permit was approved for Building Dumb to move a 1963 ft. building from her farm to her home on Eastern And Tureman Aves. —Mayor Bill Power read a letter from Superintendent of Schools Don Elder inviting Council to the Dec. 7 School Board meeting to discuss the gas bill for the Elementary School.

Council voted to refund Terry Ritchie $15 in city taxes because his assessment had been incorrectly figured.

Baugus, presently making $556 per month, asked for salary increase. The matter was tabled until the January meeting by a 4-0 vote. Clarence Cord did not vote on the motion.

Oliver Vice was given permission to purchase salt for city streets at any time now.

Charlie Fry was asked by Mayor Power to contact a surveyor to

Local property owners can buy HUD National Flood Insurance

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development announced recently that effective Nov. 4, Carlisle has been accepted into the National Flood Insurance Program.

This means, said Federal Insurance Administrator George K. Bernstein, that individual property owners here are now eligible to buy flood insurance protection at affordable, federally subsidized rates, offering more extensive coverage under the expanded program authorized by the 1973 Flood Disaster Protection Act.

We think the new, expanded National Flood Insurance Program offers a better way of protecting property owners from the ravages of floods, while easing the burden on the general public," he said.

"Since flood insurance is now available," he added, "the law requires that it must be purchased by owners of property in areas identified as flood-prone by HUD, in order to be eligible for virtually all forms of
